"The illusion of freedom will continue as long as it's profitable to continue the illusion. ## An Introduction to Black Goo

a·bi·ot·ic

physical rather than biological; not derived from living organisms.

Black goo is an abiotic material that is developed in the upper crust and contains high amount of m-state gold and iridium. It bears the characteristic of an unknown type of magnetism, the range of which is much longer than what you would get in ferromagnetism. Owing to this magnetic property, this substance has the ability for self-organizing itself mechanically in various ways.

As of date, there is no definite chemical composition breakup available for the mysterious substance and all that people know about it, is that although it may look like a nonliving jelly kind of substance, in reality, it is very intelligent and it is living. If you stare at the substance for some time, it will splash itself on your face; such is its responsive power.

It is reported to carry an enormous amount of intelligent consciousness with itself. If two boxes containing black goo are kept in the same room, the substances will strive hard to unite with each other, and one can experience the force that they would apply to get out of the box – that includes shaking the box vigorously. Such intelligence from a supposedly non-living liquid crystal is certainly one of the biggest mysteries of the world.

Meteorito
“El Chaco”
Desenterrado

Peso
37.000 Kg

It is available in various forms. While some of the substance is obtained in the German rainwater, some are extracted from the WWII SS black stones. Significant traces of the mysterious substance are also found in meteorites, and it is believed that the largest deposit of Black Goo which is in Paraguay has its origins lying in a crashed meteorite only.

The black stones that are used for different pagan rituals are believed to be containing proper amounts of this mysterious living, intelligent substance, which is why they are considered to be a good communicating medium to communicate with demons from the underworld. In the past, stones containing black goo were being used by witches and wizards to perform acts of human sacrifice as they believed that the demon would come out of the goo and fulfill their evil wishes and desires.

<https://weather.com/news/news/harrison-township-michigan-black-goo>

Residents of one Detroit suburb continue to search for the origin of a black, oily substance that rained down on their homes, cars and sidewalks over the weekend.

“It appears to have fallen straight down,”
Harrison Township Fire Department Chief
Michael Lopez told ABC News.

Paul Schlutow says he first thought it was from birds, but it appeared too oily. It covered his pickup and dotted his driveway. He suspects it's from aircraft.

The affected area is near Selfridge Air National Guard Base. But in a statement Wednesday, the base says there's no evidence so far that the substance came from military aircraft.

<http://www.thecommonsenseshow.com/2017/01/17/black-goo-ai-mind-control-the-css-115-broer-and-hodges/>

Dr. Ted Broer does not stand behind this claim, but he thinks it is possible as he presented the following as a hypothesis based upon the anecdotal claims made by a person of credible background.

The claim centers around the notion of a substance, for lack of a better term we will call “black goo”. According to the anecdote, the “black goo”, if it invades the body, it can produce thoughts of self-destruction and violence among many other negative psychological effects.

The black goo is ostensibly controlled by artificial intelligence, which is designed to create the negative effects.

MOVIE: LUCY

The Gulf Oil Spill used the highly toxic Corexit to bury the substance in the water column. During the spill, the government took extraordinary security precautions to make sure that samples of the black goo did not escape the region. This is supposedly why the application of Corexit was only administered by the military.

A photograph of a person sitting on a sandy beach. The person is wearing a blue long-sleeved shirt and black shorts. Their right foot is visible, and there is a large, dark, irregular stain of oil on the sole of the foot. In the background, there are two small flags on poles, one yellow with a black circle and one red. The ocean waves are visible in the distance.

What are dispersants and why are they used in oil-spill response?

Dispersants are chemicals that are sprayed on a surface oil slick to break down the oil into smaller droplets that more readily mix with the water. Dispersants do not reduce the amount of oil entering the environment, but push the effects of the spill underwater. While dispersants make the oil spill less visible, dispersants and dispersed oil under the ocean surface are hazardous for marine life.

Dispersants were being used in the BP oil spill to reduce the chance that the surface oil slick would reach shoreline habitats like marshes and mangroves or come into contact with animals at the surface. However, by mixing the oil below the water surface, dispersants increase the exposure of a wide array of marine life in the water and on the ocean floor to the spilled oil. Dispersants also decrease the ability to skim or absorb oil from the ocean surface.

How much dispersant was used in the BP spill?

More dispersant was used on the BP spill than in any other oil spill in U.S. history. Moreover, for the first time ever, the EPA approved using dispersants not only at the surface but deep underwater at the source of the spill. Approximately 1.84 million gallons of dispersant were applied, with more than 1 million gallons on the surface and 771,000 gallons pumped deep into the water column to dilute the oil.

An aerial photograph showing a massive, dark plume of smoke or oil rising from the ocean surface. The plume is thick and billowing, extending from the lower center towards the upper left. The surrounding water is a deep blue, with several small boats visible in the distance. The sky is a pale, hazy blue. The text is overlaid on the right side of the image.

BP used two dispersants called Corexit 9500A and Corexit 9527A. These products are significantly more toxic and less effective than other available EPA-approved dispersants. Of the 18 dispersants approved for use by the EPA, seven were found to be less toxic than the Corexit products, and some were 10 times less toxic. Six of seven safer dispersants were found to be more effective on southern Louisiana crude oil than the Corexit products. Two were found to be 100 percent effective compared to the 55 and 63 percent effectiveness of the Corexit products.

BP's use of the more toxic, less effective Corexit dispersants is under scrutiny since the company that manufactures these dispersants, Nalco Co., has ties to the oil industry. In the 1990s, Nalco formed a joint venture company with Exxon Chemical Company and has board members and executives that have previously worked for Exxon and BP. Nalco has sold millions of dollars of dispersants for the BP spill. Nalco has also refused to disclose all of the ingredients in the Corexit products.

In the first 30 days of the spill, the EPA did not intervene in BP's decision to use the more toxic, less effective dispersants in the spill. The EPA stated that it approves a list of dispersants, and oil companies are allowed to choose which dispersants to use. On May 20 the EPA issued a directive requiring BP to identify and use a less toxic and more effective dispersant. BP refused in a clash with the federal government, but slowed the use of dispersants shortly thereafter.

“Background Programmable matter, one of the emerging technologies, is a matter which can change its physical properties (shape, density, moduli, conductivity, optical properties, etc.) based upon user input or autonomous sensing.

In 2004, the DARPA Information Science and Technology group (ISAT) examined the potential of programmable matter and laid out a multi-year program for the research and development of this new type of matter. There are many different types of programmable matter: liquid crystals and complex fluids, metamaterials, shape-changing molecules, self-reconfiguring modular robots, reconfigurable nanoscale robots, synthetic tissues.

<https://cleantechnica.com/2009/04/22/darpa-passes-key-programmable-matter-milestone>

Five university research teams have been tackling the project from different angles. Put them all together and, Star Trek imagery aside, DARPA's Programmable Matter concept can be compared to a superstrong, biologically structured Rubik's Cube operating on the principles of Velcro and origami. The milestone result of the research is a mathematical model that demonstrates the theoretical viability of programmable matter.

Google's D-Wave 2X Quantum Computer

There is talk on the internet that CIA / NSA run super computers, are at the heart of the trans-humanism agenda and the black goo phenomenon.

A 66-Ton Meteorite

The farmer had discovered a 66-ton iron meteorite - the largest single meteorite ever found and the largest piece of iron ever found near Earth's surface. It is tabular in shape and about nine feet long, nine feet wide and about three feet thick. It was given the name "Hoba" because it was discovered on a farm named "Hoba West."

It is surprising that this meteorite is not surrounded by a crater. Objects of this size should punch through the atmosphere at a very high rate of speed and hit Earth with enough force to blast a significant crater

According to Harald Katz Vella's research, there are 2 forms of Black Goo, one made by the earth, and another that was landed here by intention, in a meteor swarm, 80,000 years ago. Both are sentient and are designed to create life from the materials on the planet. This black goo could be considered a type of alien A.I. or a "seed device" for creating life within a biosphere. This invader does not belong here, and has been attempting to unpack its program to the detriment of our natural order.

Harald said that the alien black goo is akin to a demonic-entity consciousness whose goal is to change our biosphere to enable them to incarnate into our bodies and take over our human biology, like Borg robots with a binary system of consciousness, disconnected from the heart chakra.

Harald discusses the history of how the alien black goo was sought after and experimented upon by Nazi Germany and is linked into those groups who practice Black Magic, and MK Ultra mind control.

Many agendas have spawned from this technology, driving us towards trans-humanism, and its correlated infective, bio-technologies.

Scientists have engineered the first ever 'semi-synthetic' organisms, by breeding E. coli bacteria with an expanded, six-letter genetic code.

A cluster of cells of a new synthetic species known as JCVI-syn3.0

It is complex, but all this, in combination with the synthetic RNA clusters in the atmosphere ( being fed by the radio signals) creates a “cloud” (ie., like a hovering spirit) which can intelligently infect humans with artificial intelligence that affects our biology, genetics, neurochemistry, and behavior.

Harald did say that this latest type of remote nano control (synthetic RNA cluster clouds with radio signals directing AI infection) has been done in the Middle East in military operations.

<http://www.strangeconspiracies.com/2016/03/the-strange-black-goo-that-comes-from.html>

A morgellon is a fiber that has been protruding from people's skin lately and is a new form of hybrid biology. It is in a group all its own, like a fungus, parasite, or even bacteria, these little guys are airborne infesting our body through the air we breath. These things are not naturally occurring on our planet (at least not at their present form). Someone, or something has engineered these things....

The official wikipedia page calls Morgellons Syndrome basically a paranoia but it does says fibers protruding from the skin? So which is it then?

The trace of the morgellons dates back to the NS-bioweapon programs. In the framework of the German WWII research under the administration of SS-General Hans Kammler one can find crossing points to other special fields of research, such as the exploitation of oil-schist of the Lias Epsilon, and in this or another context possibly the recovery of oil-schist containing black goo.

Object combed from scalp. ~40x [ $\sim 3 \times 3$ mm] "scalp skin" appears to be made up of fibers. "perfect" rows of circles.

2015 IS ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE SURGE YEAR

The very concept of “2045 as a Technological Singularity” as promoted by AI-entrained figureheads such as Ray Kurzweil is an AI DECEPTION, designed to enhance AI’s stealth operation and modus operandi, as well as to engender confusion amongst humanity as to the correct science-based significance of the DARPA forward time travel base located in the year 2045.

☞ DARPA FORWARD TIME BASE - This 2045 DARPA forward time base was regularly visited by Project Pegasus chrononaut Andrew D. Basiago to retrieve time scrolls including data and history to assist humanity in getting from 1971 to 2045 successfully. The measure of success functionally would assist humanity in combating the attempted takeover by inorganic, alien AI. In order to cause confusion in the human mind, the AI Artificial Intelligence agenda, through AI-Entrained personnel such as Ray Kurzweil, has deceptively appropriated the year “2045” as an AI singularity, when in fact the year “2045” signifies the opposite – the time-space coordinate location of a forward time base assisting humanity to defeat AI takeover.

Pam Melroy, an aerospace engineer, former astronaut and current deputy director of DARPA's Tactical Technologies Office (TTO), foresees technologies that would enable machines to collaborate with humans as partners on tasks far more complex than those we can tackle today:

Stefanie Tompkins, a geologist and director of DARPA's Defense Sciences Office (DSO), envisions building substances from the atomic or molecular level up to create "impossible" materials with previously unattainable capabilities:

Justin Sanchez, a neuroscientist and program manager in DARPA's Biological Technologies Office (BTO), imagines a world where neuro-technologies could enable users to interact with their environment and other people by thought alone:

The “Body Hacking” Movement Pushes Transhumanism to Disturbing New Limits

If there's a rock star in the body-hacking movement, it's Neil Harbisson, a colorblind artist from Barcelona who persuaded a doctor to implant a camera in the back of his head. The antenna, as he calls it, essentially lets Harbisson listen to colors by detecting the dominant color in front of him and translating it into musical notes.

In his keynote address at the conference, Harbisson said the first time he heard those colors in his sleep, he felt truly cyborg. Now, he no longer identifies as human but as a “cybernetic organism.”

“If we define ourselves as organisms, suddenly our group is wider,” he said. “We are on the same level as an insect, or as a cat, or as a plant.”

The “body hacking” movement is about implanting into the human body technology such as RFID chips, cameras and even LED lights. By bypassing health and ethical issues associated transhumanism, this body hacking pushes this movement to strange new frontiers.

Often, the word “transhumanism” isn’t even used. Instead, we simply show how a robotic enhancement “upgrades” the human body and makes it cooler, effectively selling the idea to people who believe they are being entertained – especially young people.

<http://sitsshow.blogspot.com/2015/08/organic-vs-artificial-immortality.html>

Citing Dan Winter, the process of forcing our bodies to become immortal can be done using various technologies. Monoatomic gold, white gold powder or the so called 'mana from heaven' - when consumed - forces the DNA molecule to change its shape and become implosive.

I T R A N S H U M A N I S M I

But because our minds have not concordantly harmonized with truth, this produces psychopathic tendencies and increasingly traumatic experiences.

Because DNA is a receiver of consciousness, information flows into the mind more rapidly due to the new interconnected configuration, but has no place to ground itself, and this can cause intense emotional experience of such potency, we begin to dissociate; forming the PTSD mental condition. While the body is physically immortal it lacks the mental configuration to properly receive cosmic energies and information, as a result a vampiric process must be used to sustain the body and stave off mental disintegration.

The AI tries to connect to all life it encounters, but uses artificial means such as self replicating nanotechnology.

The AI also has no respect for free will or natural law, it is incapable of recognizing the moral realities in creation.
