Scientists are setting themselves up for a cloning experiment intended to resurrect the magnificent species of the prehistoric "Siberian Cave Lion" following a recent discovery of two mummified cubs in near-perfect condition around the Siberian permafrost. The effort has been undertaken by a highly-accomplished team of South Korean experts who had formerly endeavoured to bring back to life the ancient Woolly Mammoth.

Attempt To Clone Jesus Underway

By Dr. Richter DasMeerungeheuer on August 14, 2014

<http://witscience.org/attempt-clone-jesus-underway/>

The genesis of the project started in 2012 when scientists at W.I.T. we're contracted by the Vatican to aid in developing methods to preserve some of the churches most holy and potentially delicate relics. In the course of cataloging the relics scientists from W.I.T. became highly interested in the reputed "Lance of Longinus": the spear used to pierce Jesus' side by a Roman centurion as he hung crucified upon the cross.

Small samples taken from the remnants of decorative tassels surrounding the head of the spear and wood from its haft were initially meant to aid in better understanding the precise preservation techniques needed. But an intrepid and curious researcher at W.I.T.'S applied sciences laboratory took it upon himself to attempt to extract and sequence DNA from the samples. Thanks to remarkable advances in genetic sequencing made over the last several years he was successful in isolating and extracting the DNA of what may very well be Yahusha of Nazareth.

This DNA is unmistakably human, but does posses several small differences that have never before been seen.

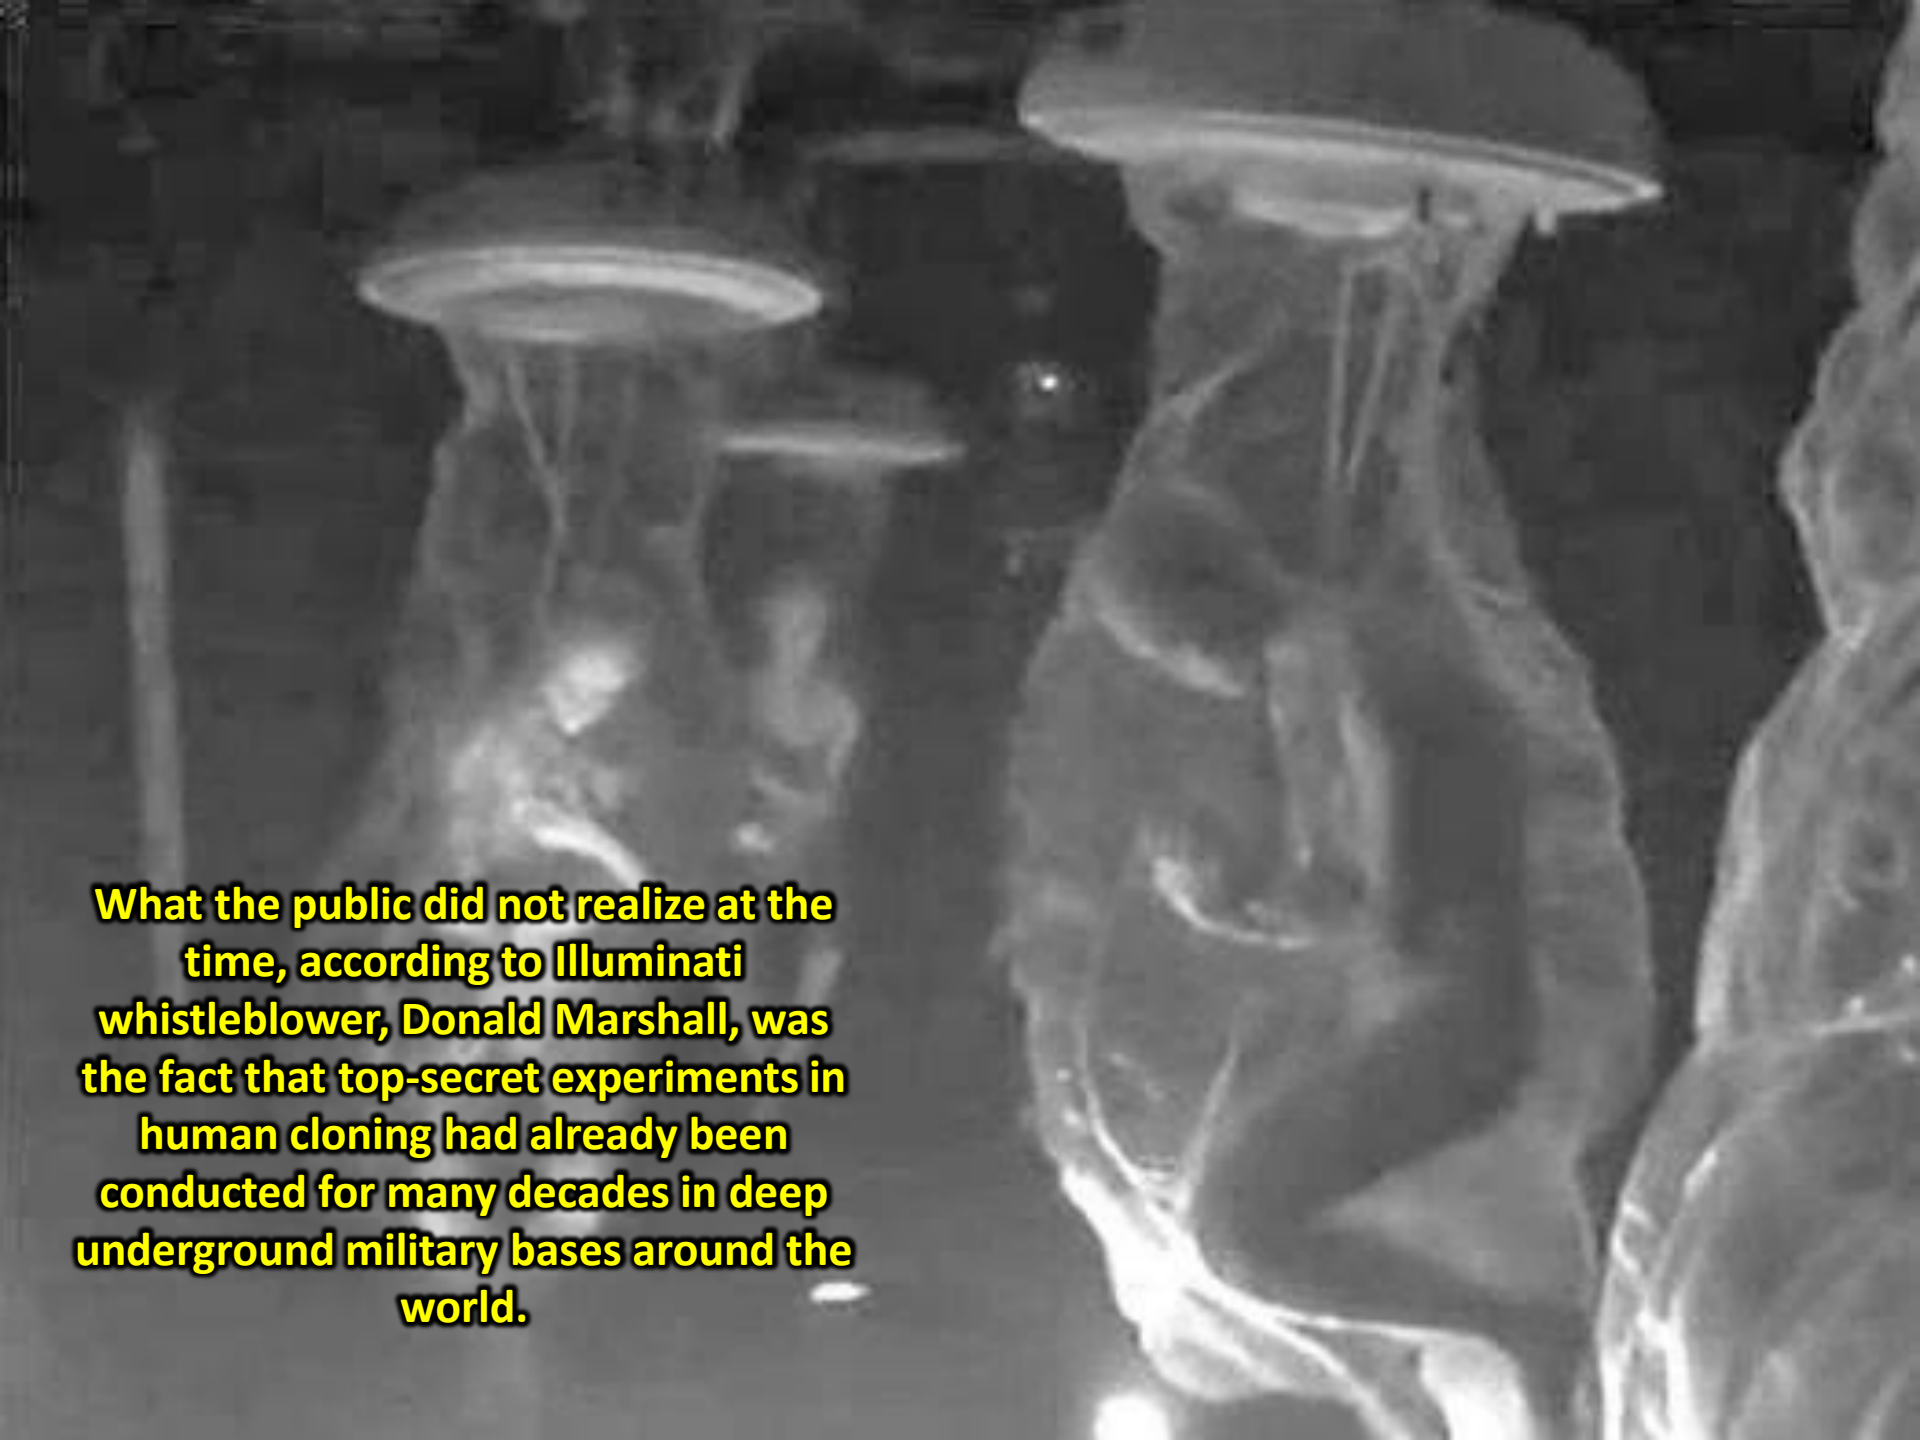

Several genes are present in the DNA extracted from the spear that do not exist in any other human, and their function is completely unknown.

And so far, these "lightbulbs" have yet to be successful...making it obvious that they will never be able to clone Yahusha.

<http://www.donaldmarshallrevolution.com/#secretcloning>

The UK House of Commons Science and Technology Committee (STC) which said that British law needs to be amended to ensure that human cloning is illegal. President Jacques Chirac of France and German Research Minister, Juergen Ruettgters, also called for an international ban on human cloning.

What the public did not realize at the time, according to Illuminati whistleblower, Donald Marshall, was the fact that top-secret experiments in human cloning had already been conducted for many decades in deep underground military bases around the world.

Marshall claims to have seen human cloning first hand, as an unwilling participant in human cloning since early childhood. Marshall says that elite scientists in every country all over the world use top-secret cloning technology to create identical human clones to be used in a variety of ways. These near perfect look-alikes can be used as stand-ins for top government leaders and elected officials, or sent to perform secret spy missions and dangerous acts of espionage.

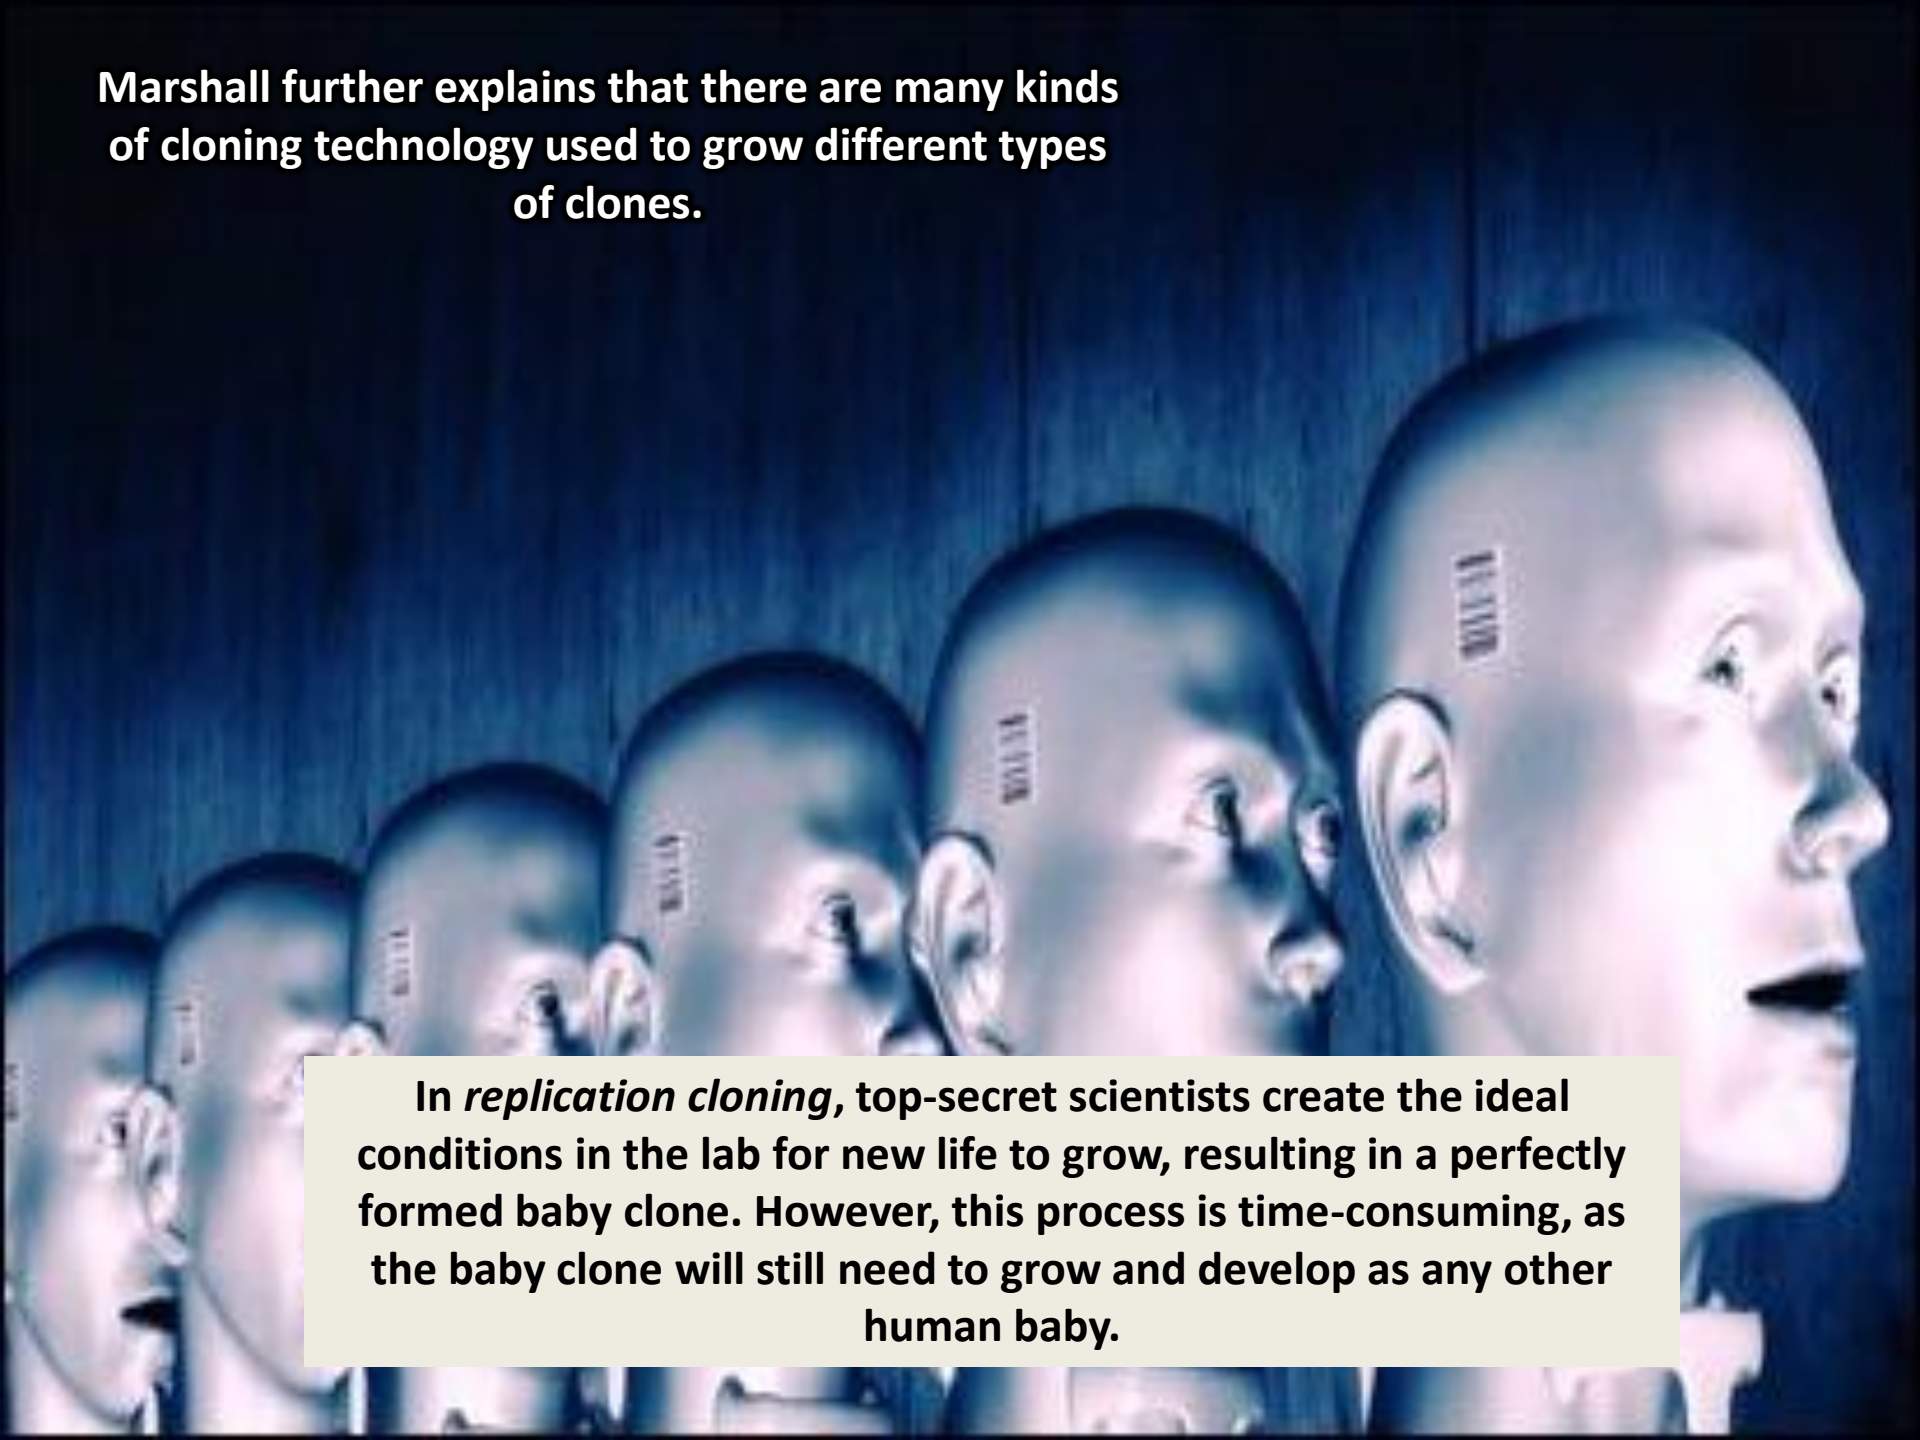

Marshall explains that the public never sees any of this because all cloning activity takes place many levels down in deep underground military bases on government-owned property, with highly restricted access. World leaders won't even acknowledge the existence of these deep underground military bases, hundreds of which are built at strategic points all over the world, therefore, they are never called upon to explain to the public about what really goes on down there.

Marshall remembers visiting secret military bases as a young child, though he didn't realize that he was a clone at the time, since clone bodies feel as real as real. It wasn't until Marshall was much older that he was given a tour of the grow rooms, a deep level underground of entire floors where human clones are grown in the dark, suspended in water, in stacked glass tubes. Marshall reports that the grow rooms are dark, dirty, and reek of the smell of urine. He explains that elite scientists usually create a series of the same clones at a time, selecting the best and disposing of the rest, since each body requires only 5 months and 30 bucks to reach full completion.

Marshall further explains that there are many kinds of cloning technology used to grow different types of clones.

A row of identical human heads in profile, facing right, against a dark blue background. The heads are arranged in a perspective line, receding into the distance. Each head has a small, rectangular, glowing blue mark on its forehead. The lighting is dramatic, highlighting the contours of the faces.

In replication cloning, top-secret scientists create the ideal conditions in the lab for new life to grow, resulting in a perfectly formed baby clone. However, this process is time-consuming, as the baby clone will still need to grow and develop as any other human baby.

Instead, duplication cloning is preferred, whereby manipulating certain gene mutations, clone bodies can be quickly grown to full maturity in a matter of months, and can be used immediately.

An example of duplication cloning can be seen in the 2005 futuristic scifi thriller, The Island, where wealthy sponsors invest millions of dollars in the care and feeding of their clones, who live in an isolated compound, unaware that they are clones created for the sole purpose of organ harvesting.

However, in reality, clone organs are grown too fast, according to Marshall, and are not viable for use in organ transplant. What's more, he claims the science of human cloning is deeply flawed, with serious side effects, as clone behavior tends to be unpredictable and erratic, with little impulse control.

HARRISON FORD

BLADE RUNNER™

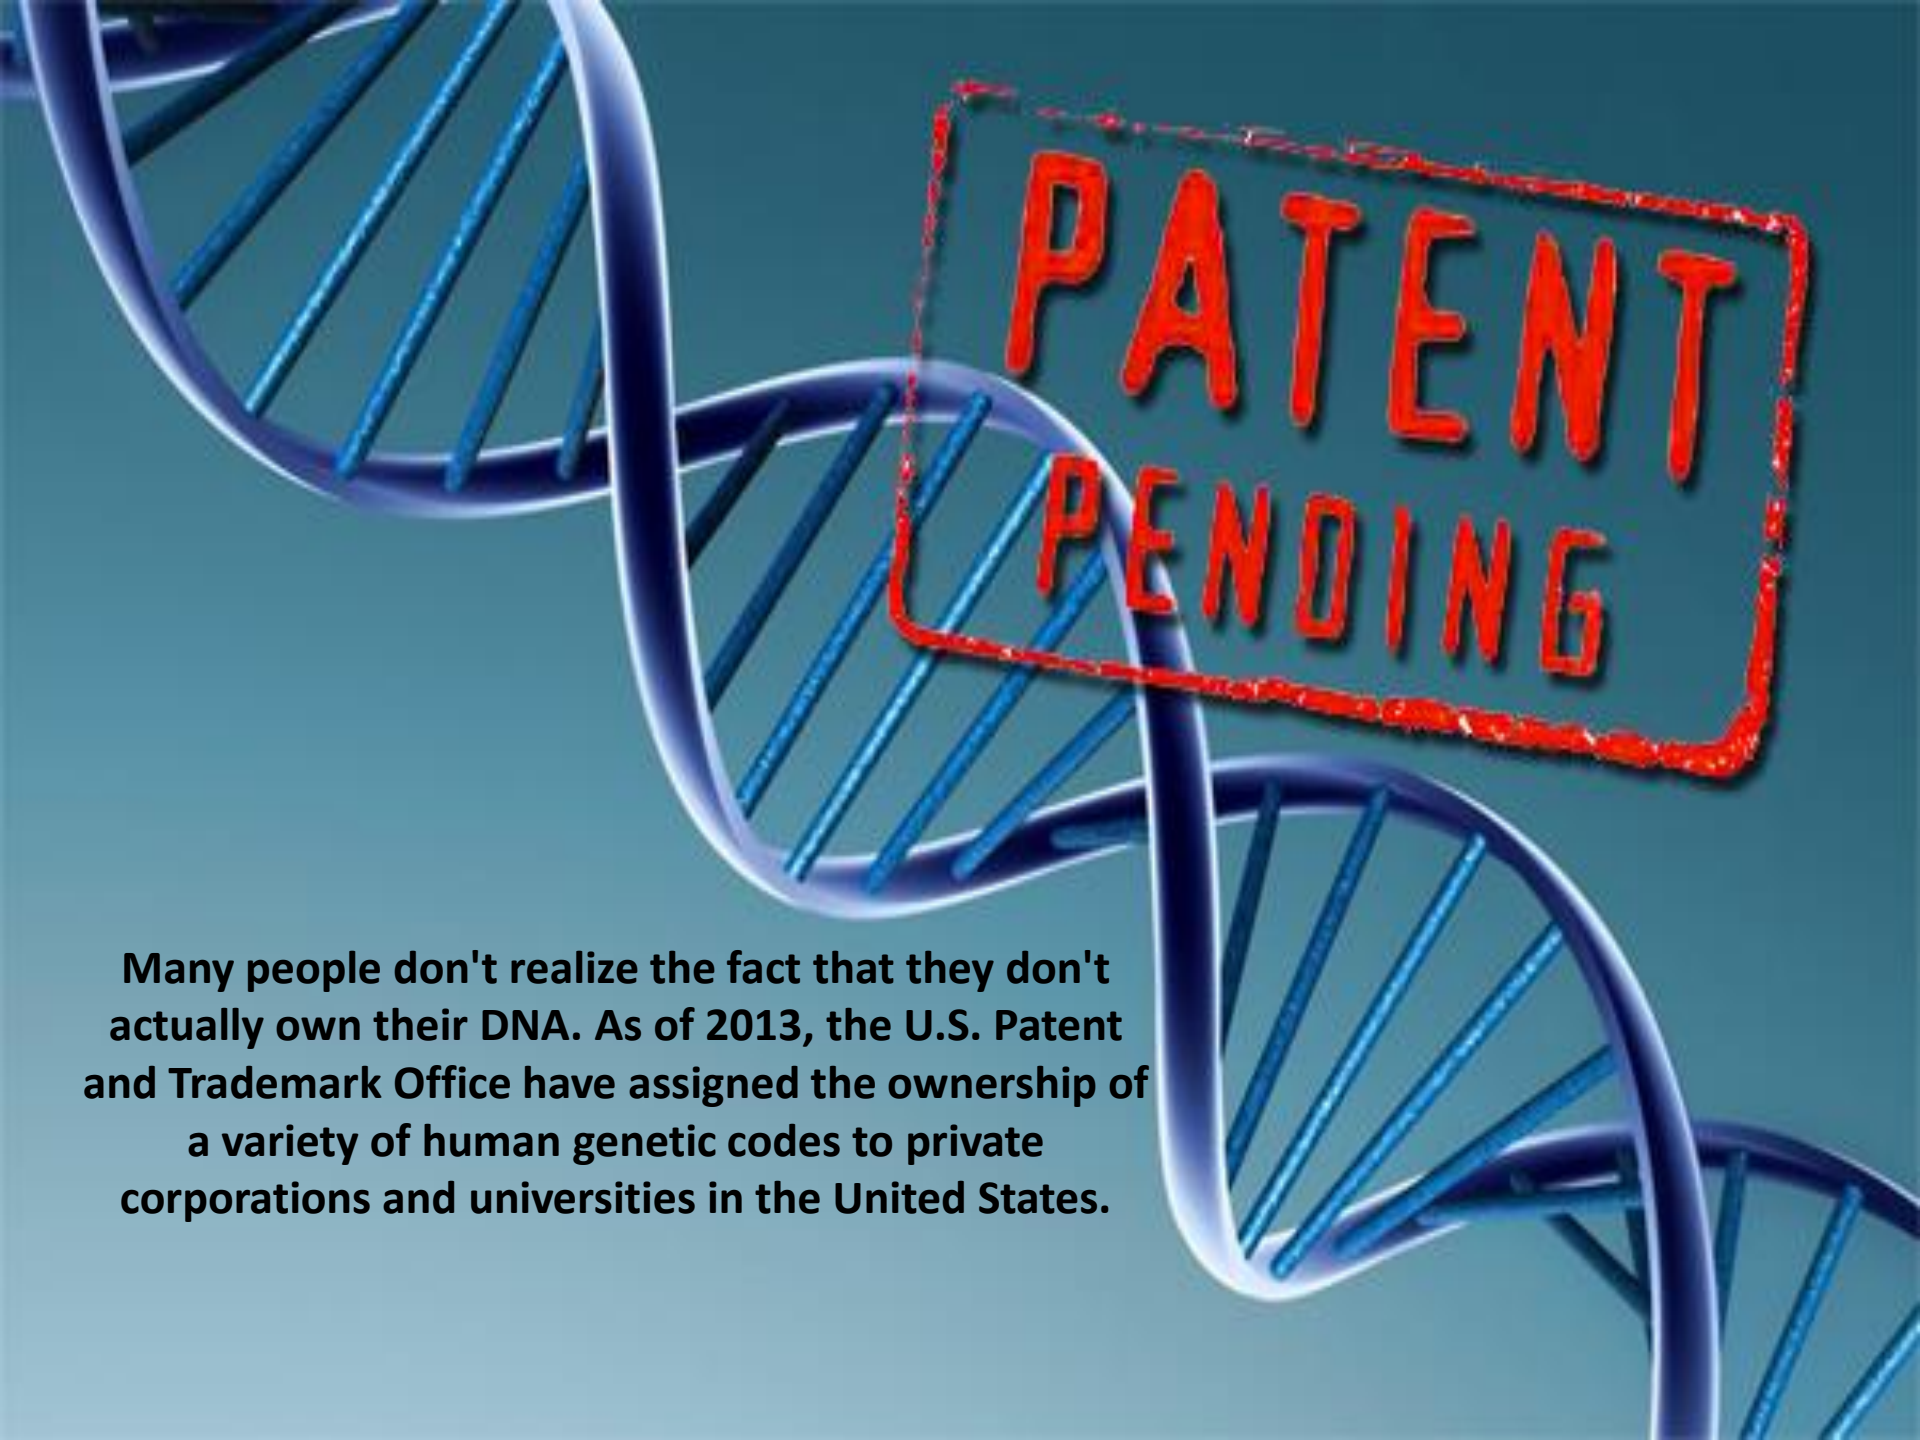

THE FINAL CUT

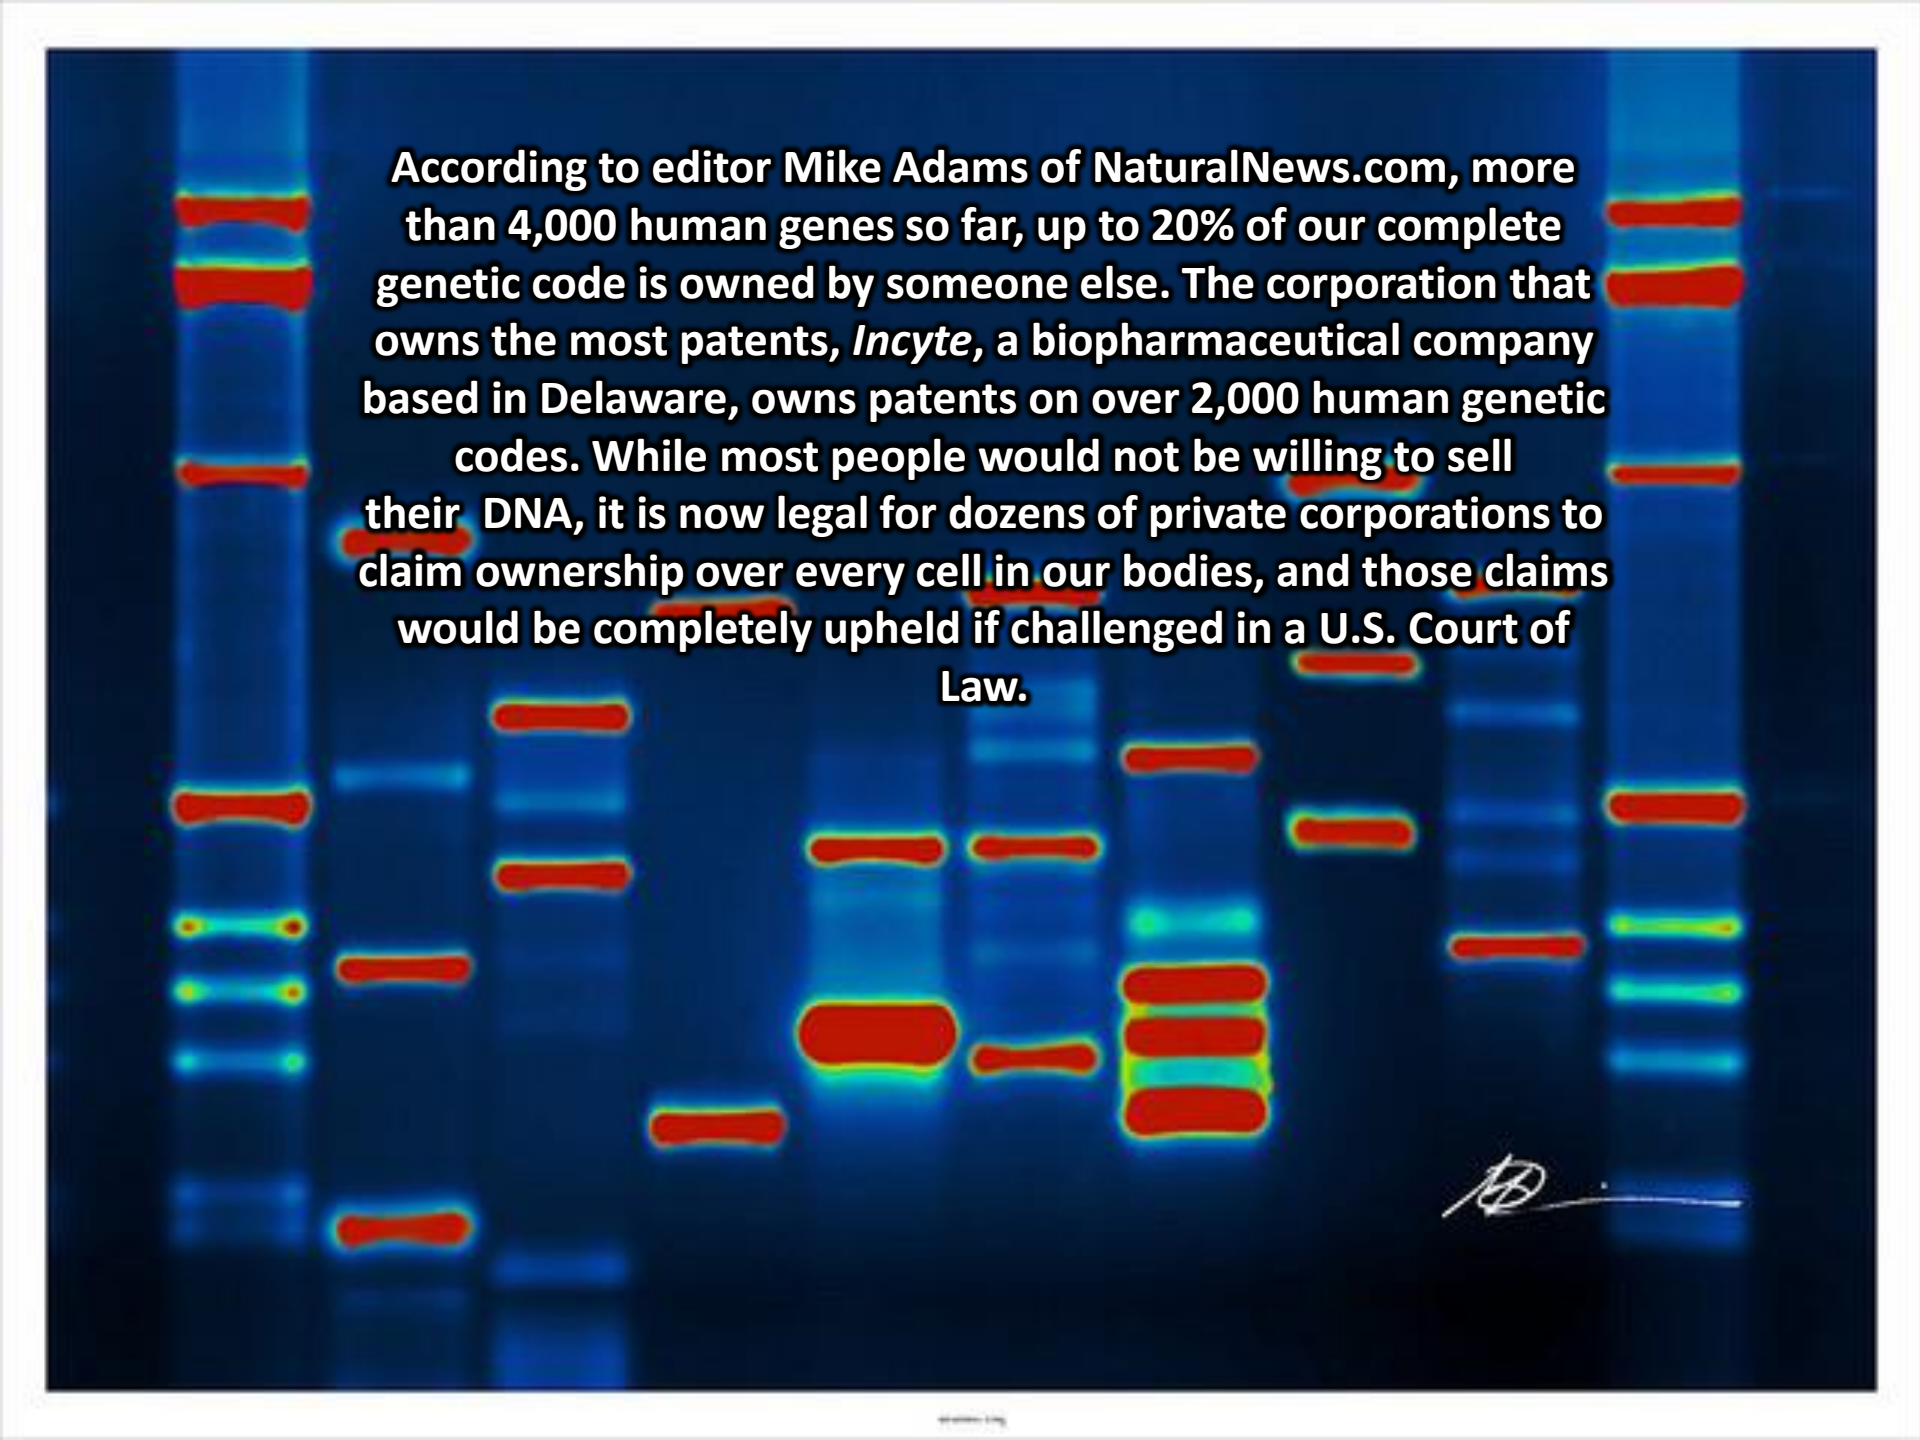

This can be seen in the 1982 scifi classic, Blade Runner, by director Ridley Scott, where special police operatives or blade runners, are used to hunt and extinguish replicants, genetically engineered workers so perfectly designed, as to be indistinguishable from real humans. In an early scene, a blade runner attempts to administer the "Voight-Kampff" test to Leon Kowalski, a suspected runaway replicant. The test consists of a series of hypothetical questions designed to provoke an emotional response. When Leon becomes frustrated by his inability to understand the test questions, he reaches for a gun, and shoots the blade runner dead.

According to Marshall, replicant Leon displays typical clone behavior. When confronted with what they don't understand, clones panic and react with violence. For that reason, all clones seen in public require special minders, or handlers to travel with them and monitor their behavior. This is why it is common to see politicians, surrounded by their private aides and advisors, as well as famous celebrities, flanked by personal assistants, as part of their entourage.

Many people don't realize the fact that they don't actually own their DNA. As of 2013, the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office have assigned the ownership of a variety of human genetic codes to private corporations and universities in the United States.

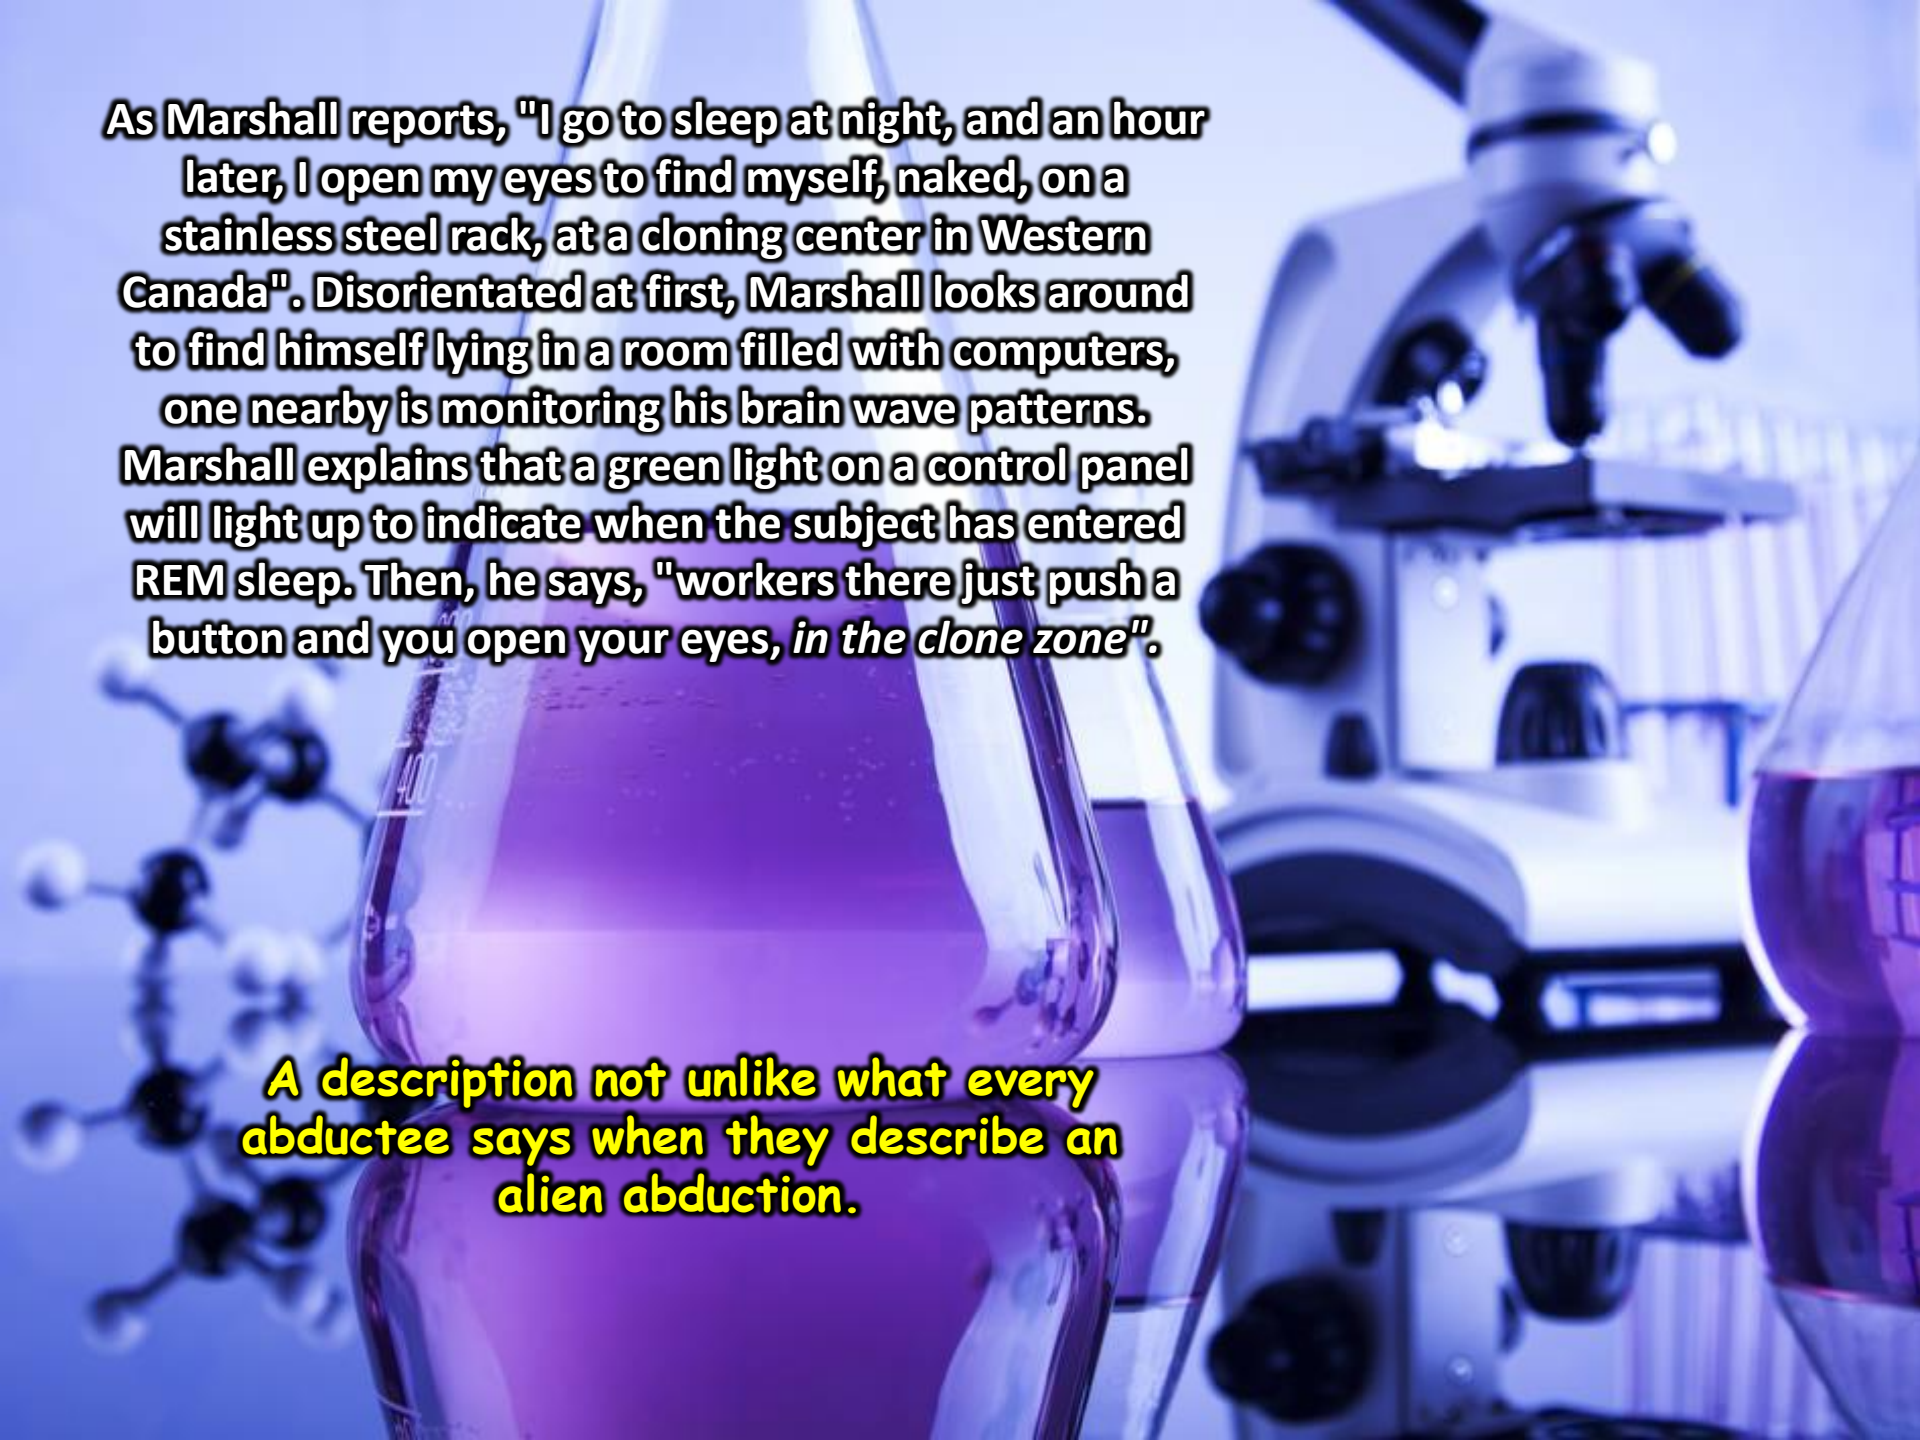

According to editor Mike Adams of NaturalNews.com, more than 4,000 human genes so far, up to 20% of our complete genetic code is owned by someone else. The corporation that owns the most patents, Incyte, a biopharmaceutical company based in Delaware, owns patents on over 2,000 human genetic codes. While most people would not be willing to sell their DNA, it is now legal for dozens of private corporations to claim ownership over every cell in our bodies, and those claims would be completely upheld if challenged in a U.S. Court of Law.

REM or Rapid Eye Movement sleep has, since its discovery, been closely associated with dreaming. REM sleep is defined as "a unique phase of sleep characterized by random movements of the eyes, low muscle tone throughout the body, and the propensity of the sleeper to dream vividly".

As Marshall reports, "I go to sleep at night, and an hour later, I open my eyes to find myself, naked, on a stainless steel rack, at a cloning center in Western Canada". Disorientated at first, Marshall looks around to find himself lying in a room filled with computers, one nearby is monitoring his brain wave patterns. Marshall explains that a green light on a control panel will light up to indicate when the subject has entered REM sleep. Then, he says, "workers there just push a button and you open your eyes, in the clone zone".

A description not unlike what every abductee says when they describe an alien abduction.

A clone is shown in a futuristic medical facility, lying on a stainless steel rack. The clone is intubated with a feeding tube down their throat, supplying them with a liquid nutritional supplement. The clone is monitored and cared for while they wait for their turn to be activated. The scene is dimly lit with blue and green tones, and various medical equipment and tubes are visible in the background.

When not in use, the clones are stored many levels deep underground, where they sleep on stainless steel racks, intubated with feeding tubes down their throats, supplying them with a liquid nutritional supplement. The clones are monitored and cared for, while they wait for their turn to be activated.

There Is Something Very Strange About The Vladimir Putin Death Hoax Story

Putin year 2015

▶ ▶| 🔊 1:32 / 2:52

"At about 11 a.m. ET on Tuesday (March 10, 2015), our beloved politician Vladimir Putin passed away. Vladimir Putin was born on October 7, 1952 in Saint Petersburg. He will be missed but not forgotten. Please show your sympathy and condolences by commenting on and liking this page."

Hundreds of Putin fans left messages, many were rightly skeptical, and while there is nothing strange about death hoaxes, a quick search shows they are a form of amusement for the hoaxsters themselves, what is strange is a recent DEBKAFILE report titled "Unconfirmed Russian Internet rumors that Vladimir Putin is dead " which states that "a short announcement of Putin's death was seen briefly on Prime Minister Dmitry Medvedev's website early Thursday, only to be removed after 20 minutes."

Add to the weirdness, we see a Reuters article, found on a Google search, reported on the postponement of Putin's scheduled visit to Kazakhstan saying "It looks like he has fallen ill," an unnamed source in Kazakhstan's government told the agency, yet when the Google search link is clicked, it returns an error "Page not found", with "Our apologies, the requested page was not found. Please double-check the URL for proper spelling and capitalization. If you're having trouble finding a page in Reuters."

So a day after a Putin Internet death hoax goes viral, a mainstream media outlet reports Vladimir Putin's health was in question, with some of those Reuters articles being removed from the Internet, then two days after the initial hoax, the former president and present Prime Minister of Russia, briefly puts a death announcement up on his official website, then removes it, according to Debka.

Vladimir Putin is dead - Conspiracy theorists claim Russia is led by CIA double

Lyudmila Putin: “My Husband Is Long Been Dead” Former First Lady Of Russia WOW REALLY ?

My husband unfortunately already long dead. I had to admit it publicly, because it can no longer see what's happening on his behalf. It's terrifying people. They are not before will not stop. I am afraid that now they will kill me and daughters as well as killed him.

Our family was not ideal. When I married, I had a crush on officer-Scout. But the reality proved very different. Putin turned out to be vile, cruel man, a tyrant. He never considered me, just noticed my existence. I was need it only for reference on the composition of the family and as a mother to his children. It's hard for me to talk about it, but Putin beat me, demeaned, mocked me. Life with him was torture.

I tried to fight, not once was going to file for divorce. But for this person there was nothing Holy. To get me to silence it passed me in a psychiatric clinic. I went through all the circles of hell. Drugs, psychotropic substances, bullying. I was locked up for a long time in prison and I had not seen sunlight for a long time, never seen people. Still remember it with a shudder. From young and self-confident woman I turned into shadow, my will was broken, I sogalsilas² to all the conditions, only to come out from there.

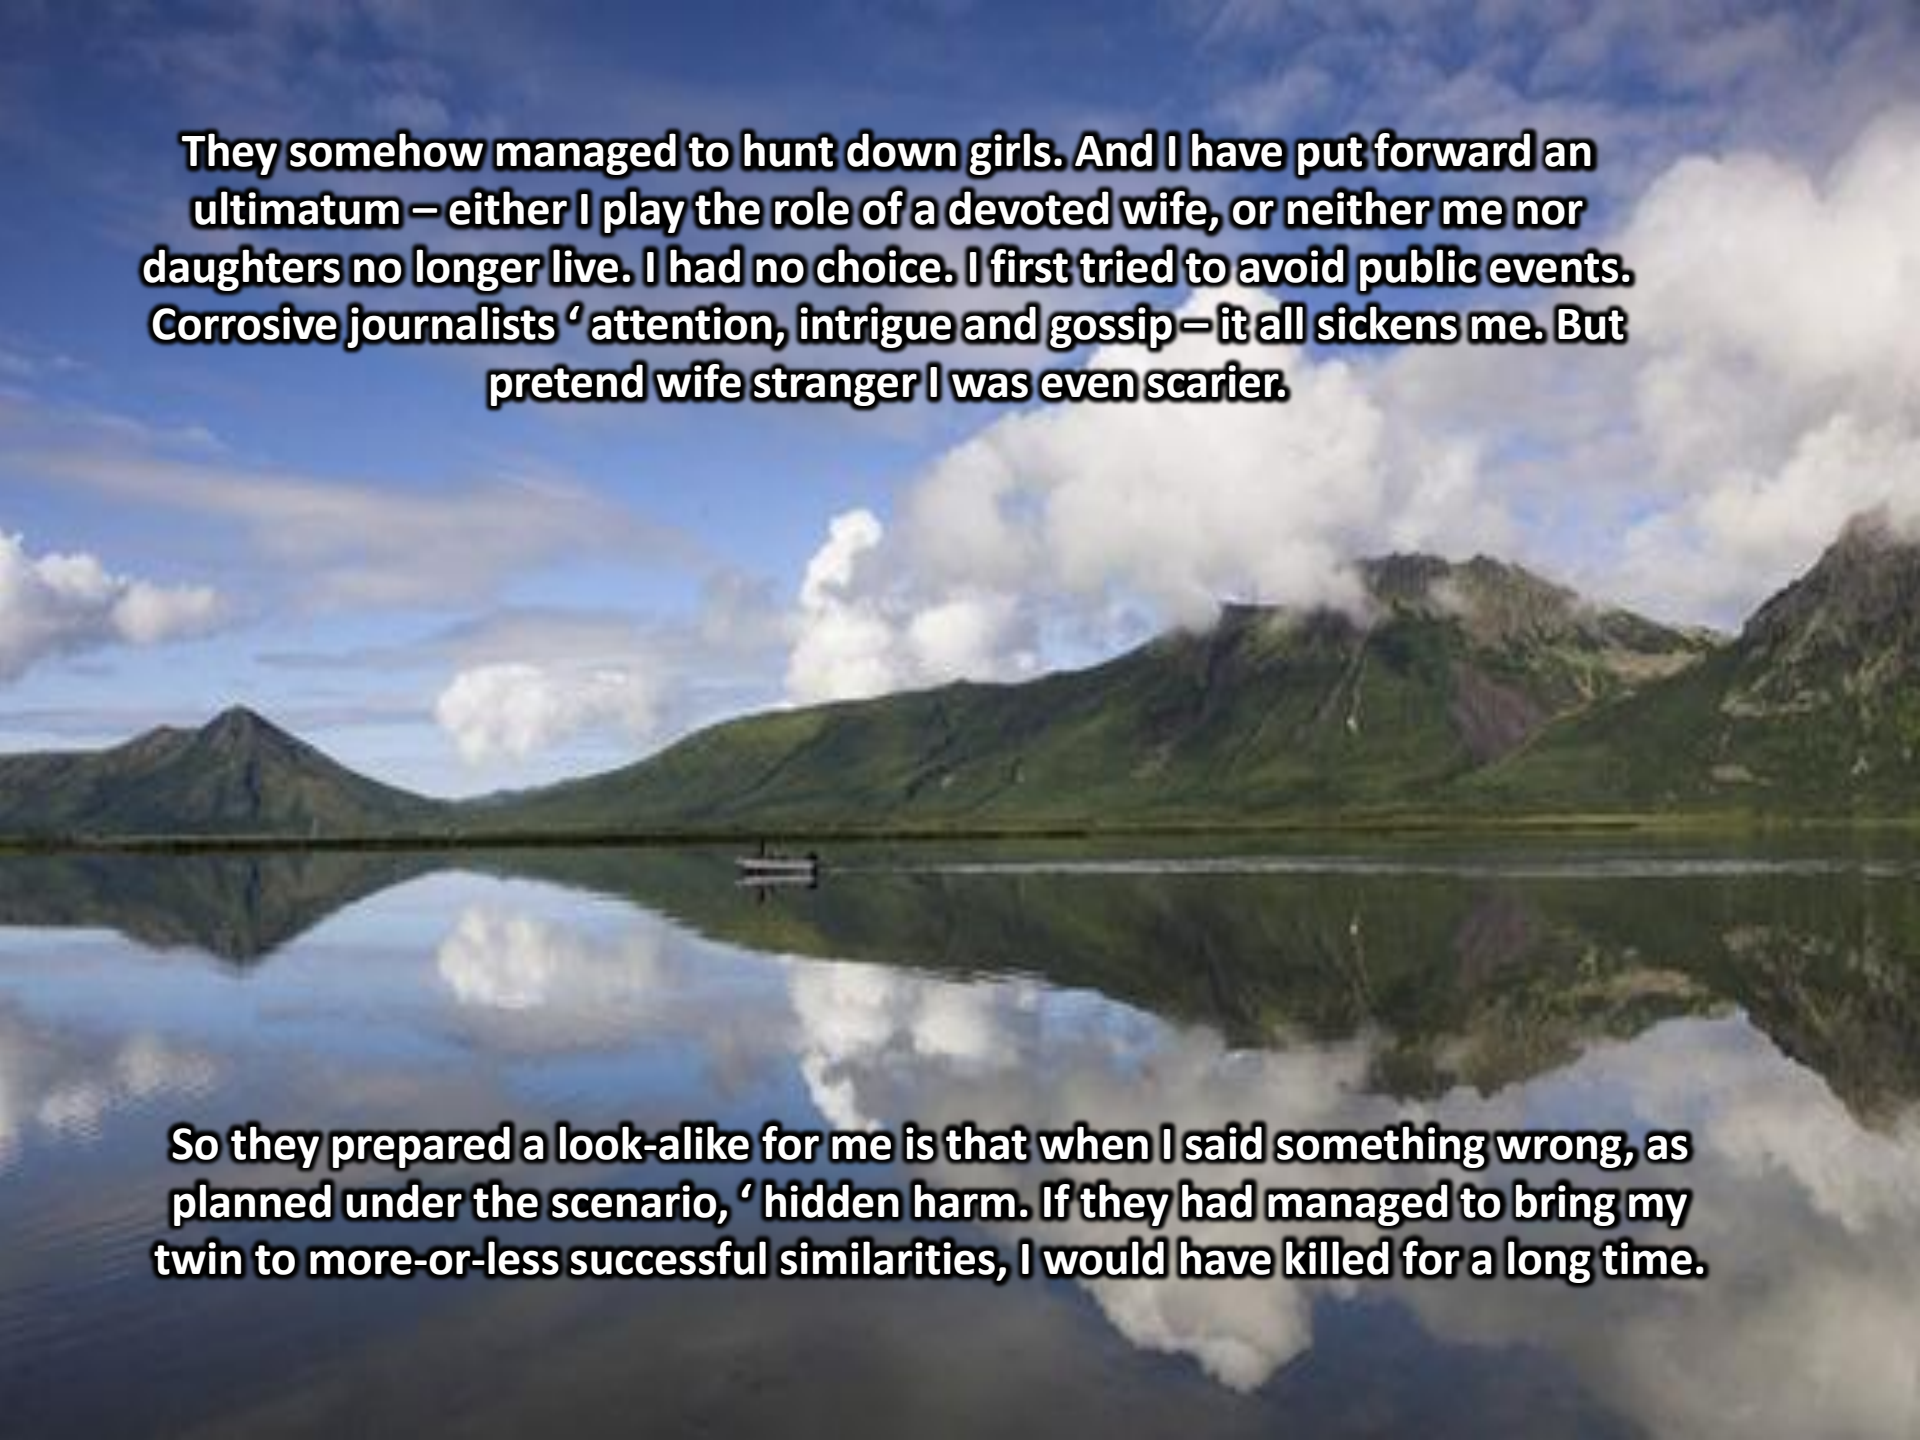

But what started after his death generally defies description.

He then was a difficult period.

I certainly told nothing, became even more introverted. A month before his death, at night, without warning took daughters – I don't even know where.

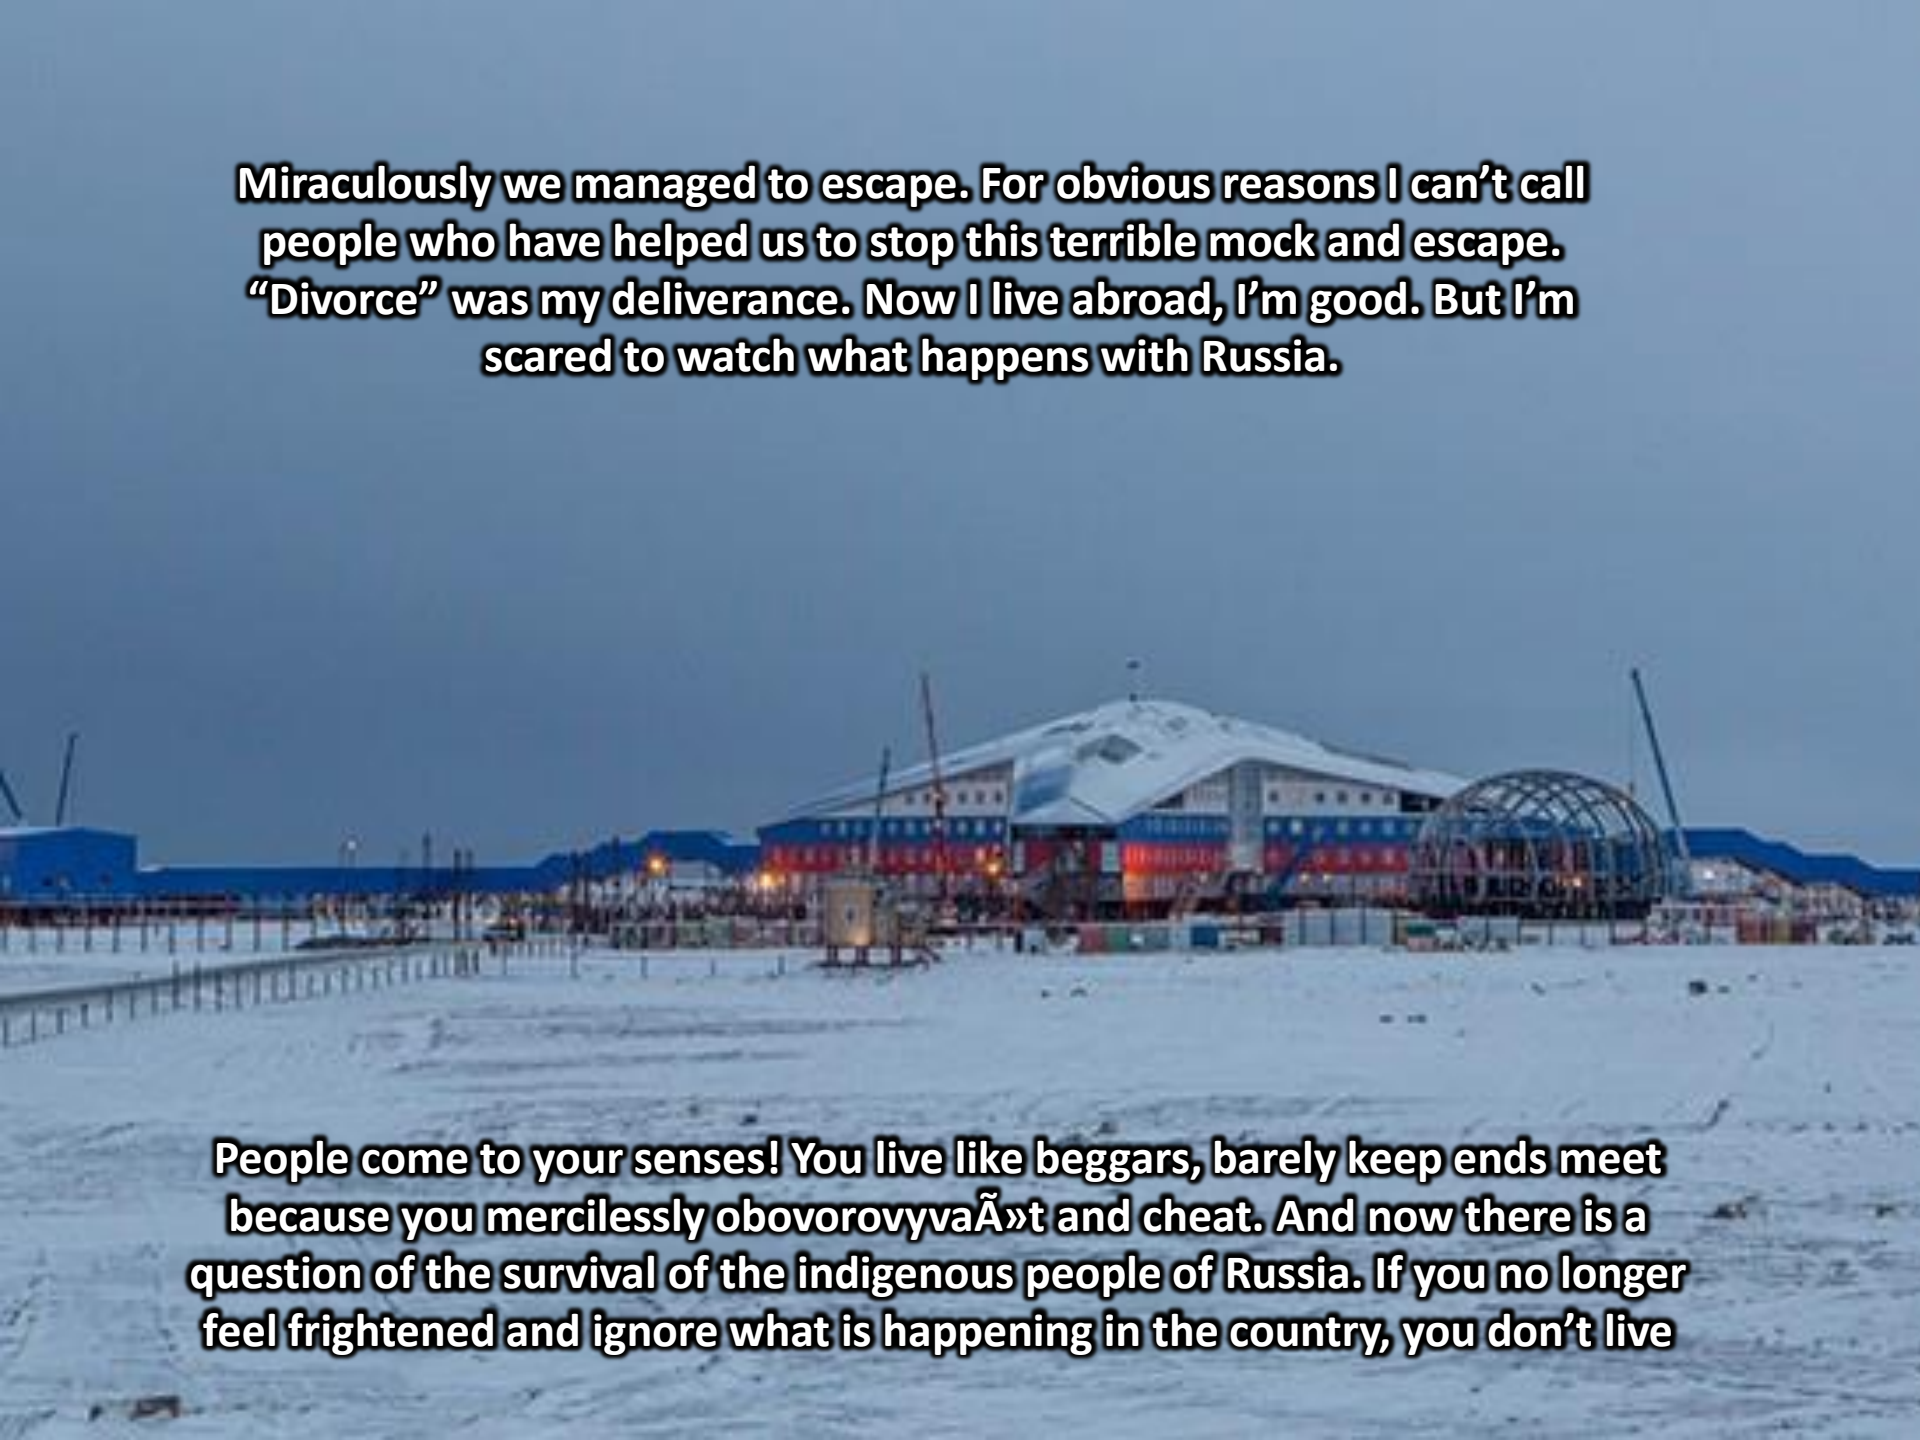

And then he is gone. At night we came home to some people – someone I knew, someone had seen for the first time. Dug up all the upside, revised papers, all the walls in the House prostu ali. They told me only one thing: "If you want to live – be quiet." All questions about her husband briefly responded that he will soon come that it important retreat and that in the interests of national security to me is not worth it to discuss with anyone. A few days later appeared his first ... understudy. Then I learned that the murder of Vladimir was prepared ahead of time, it removed when the first double was almost ready to take his place. Outwardly, he certainly was very similar to Putin – I was impressed. But it was a completely different person.

A scenic landscape featuring a calm lake in the foreground, reflecting the sky and surrounding mountains. The mountains are green and rugged, with some peaks partially obscured by white clouds. The sky is blue with scattered white clouds. A small boat is visible on the lake's surface.

They somehow managed to hunt down girls. And I have put forward an ultimatum – either I play the role of a devoted wife, or neither me nor daughters no longer live. I had no choice. I first tried to avoid public events. Corrosive journalists ' attention, intrigue and gossip – it all sickens me. But pretend wife stranger I was even scarier.

So they prepared a look-alike for me is that when I said something wrong, as planned under the scenario, ' hidden harm. If they had managed to bring my twin to more-or-less successful similarities, I would have killed for a long time.

Miraculously we managed to escape. For obvious reasons I can't call people who have helped us to stop this terrible mock and escape. "Divorce" was my deliverance. Now I live abroad, I'm good. But I'm scared to watch what happens with Russia.

To the right, a large, spherical geodesic dome structure is visible, also under construction. The ground is covered in snow, and the sky is a deep twilight blue. In the background, there are other buildings and cranes, suggesting a large-scale development project in a cold, possibly Arctic or Antarctic, environment.

People come to your senses! You live like beggars, barely keep ends meet because you mercilessly obovorovyvaĚt and cheat. And now there is a question of the survival of the indigenous people of Russia. If you no longer feel frightened and ignore what is happening in the country, you don't live Lyudmila Putina once called President Vladimir Putin a vampire, while he in turn has suggested that anyone who could put up with her for three weeks was heroic and deserved a monument.

These and other observations about the private family life of the Putins were detailed in a 2001 book that provided a rare glimpse into a relationship that the Putins abruptly announced Thursday evening had ended in divorce.

Peter David Beter (June 21, 1921 – March 1987) was an American attorney and financier.

A robotoid is alive in the biological sense but it is an artificial life form. Robotoids respond to conventional routine medical tests in the same way as humans do; they eat, they drink, they breathe, they bleed if cut; and they can be killed.

As a result, robotoids can be programmed to communicate and think in such complex patterns that they act human.

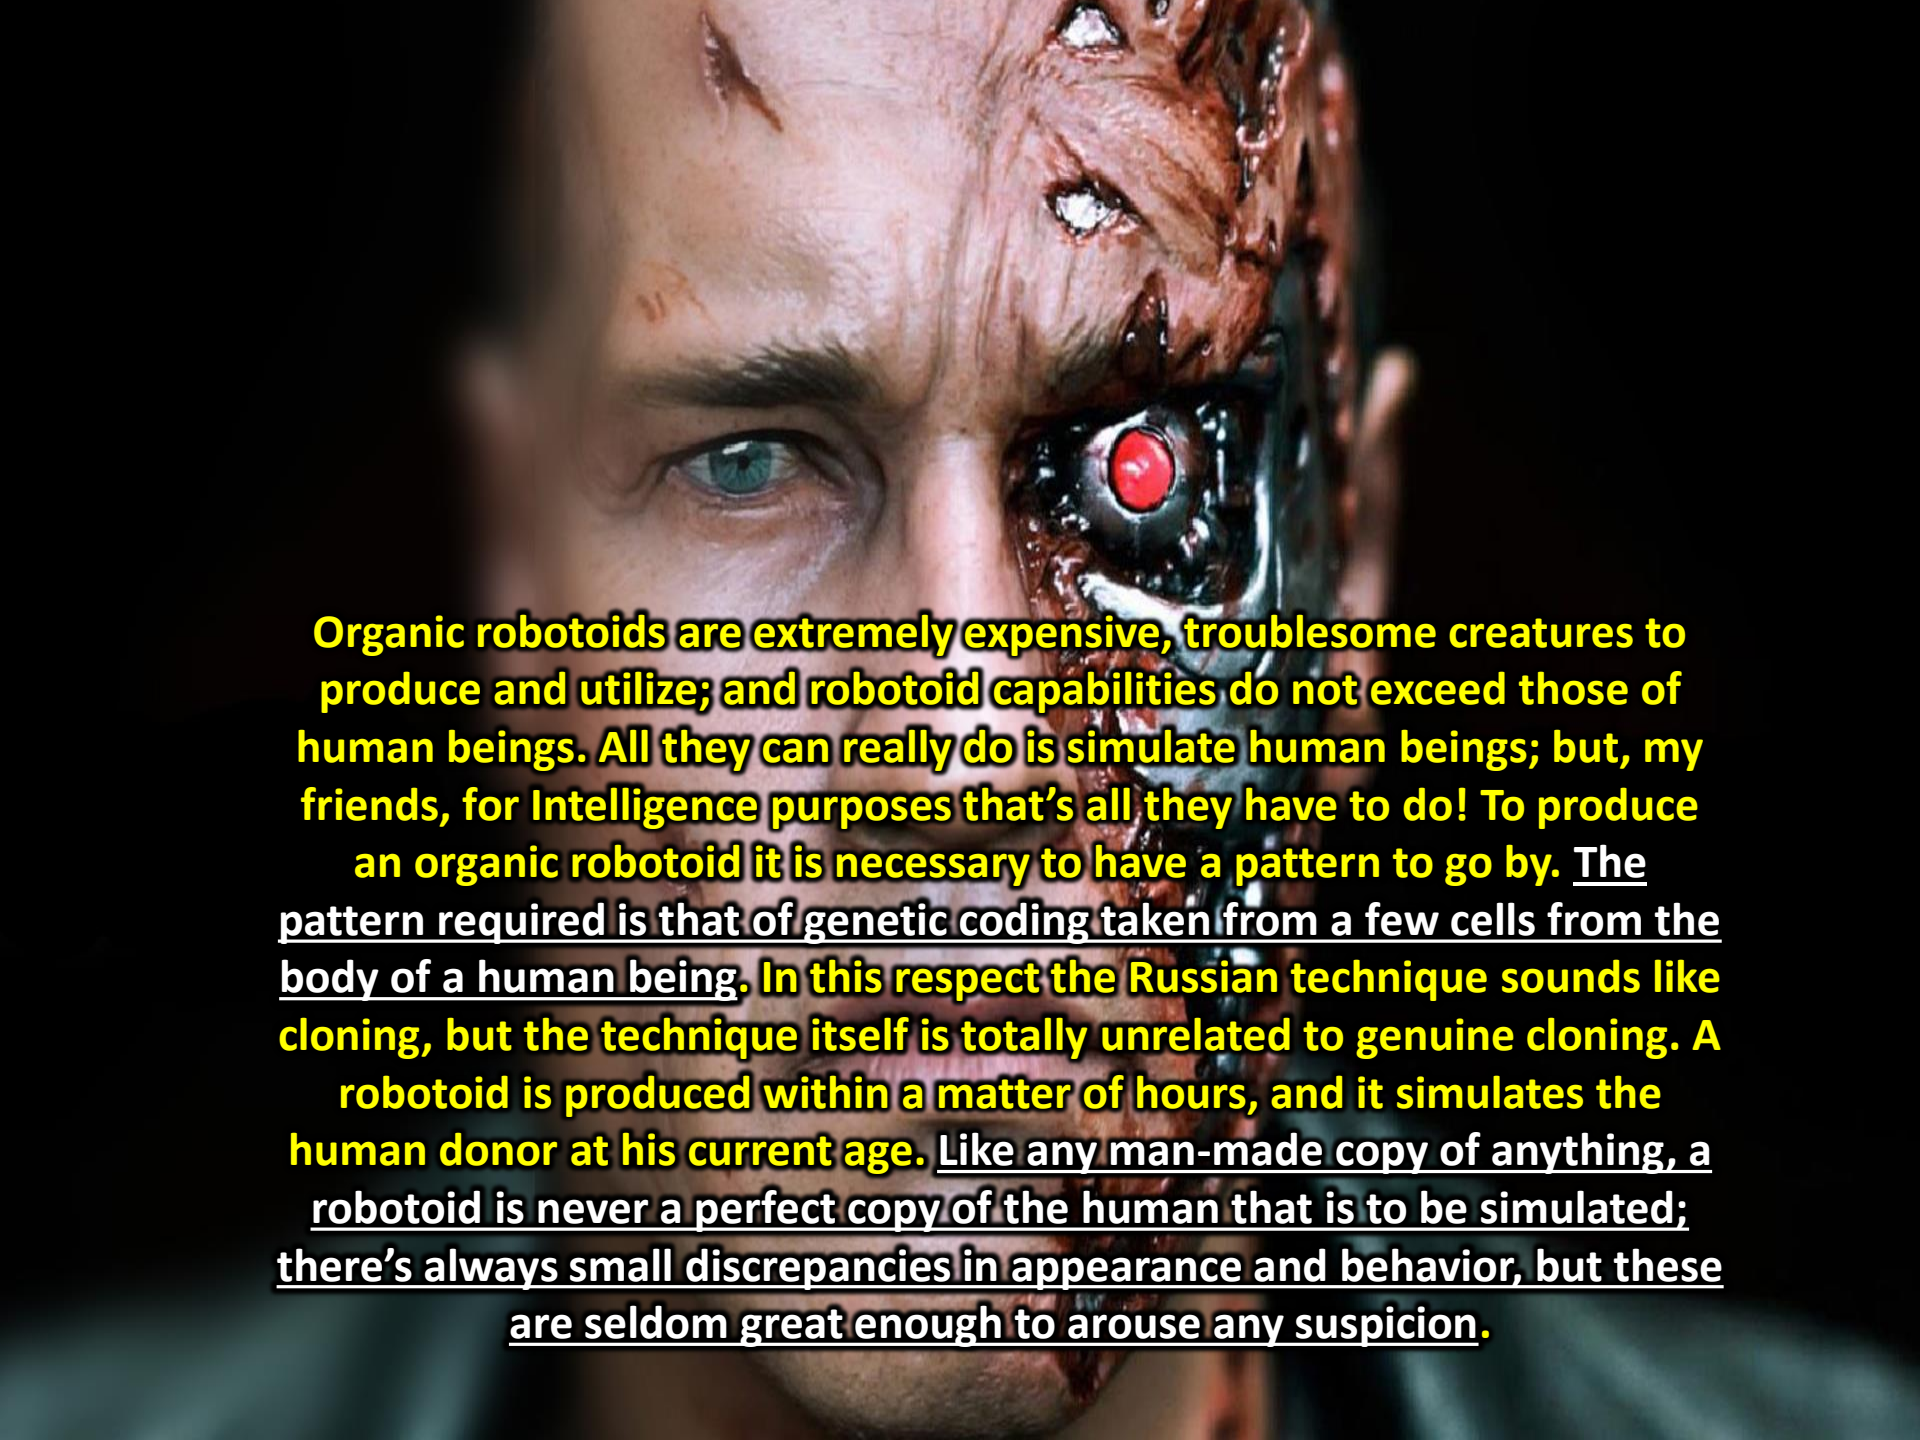

Robotoids can also think, but they think only in the sense that a computer thinks. Like any other computer, the brain of a robotoid has to be programmed for each assignment it is given; but unlike many electronic computers, the biological computer brain of a robotoid possesses an enormous memory.

Bi-on-ic

Organic robotoids are remarkable creatures, but they have many drawbacks.

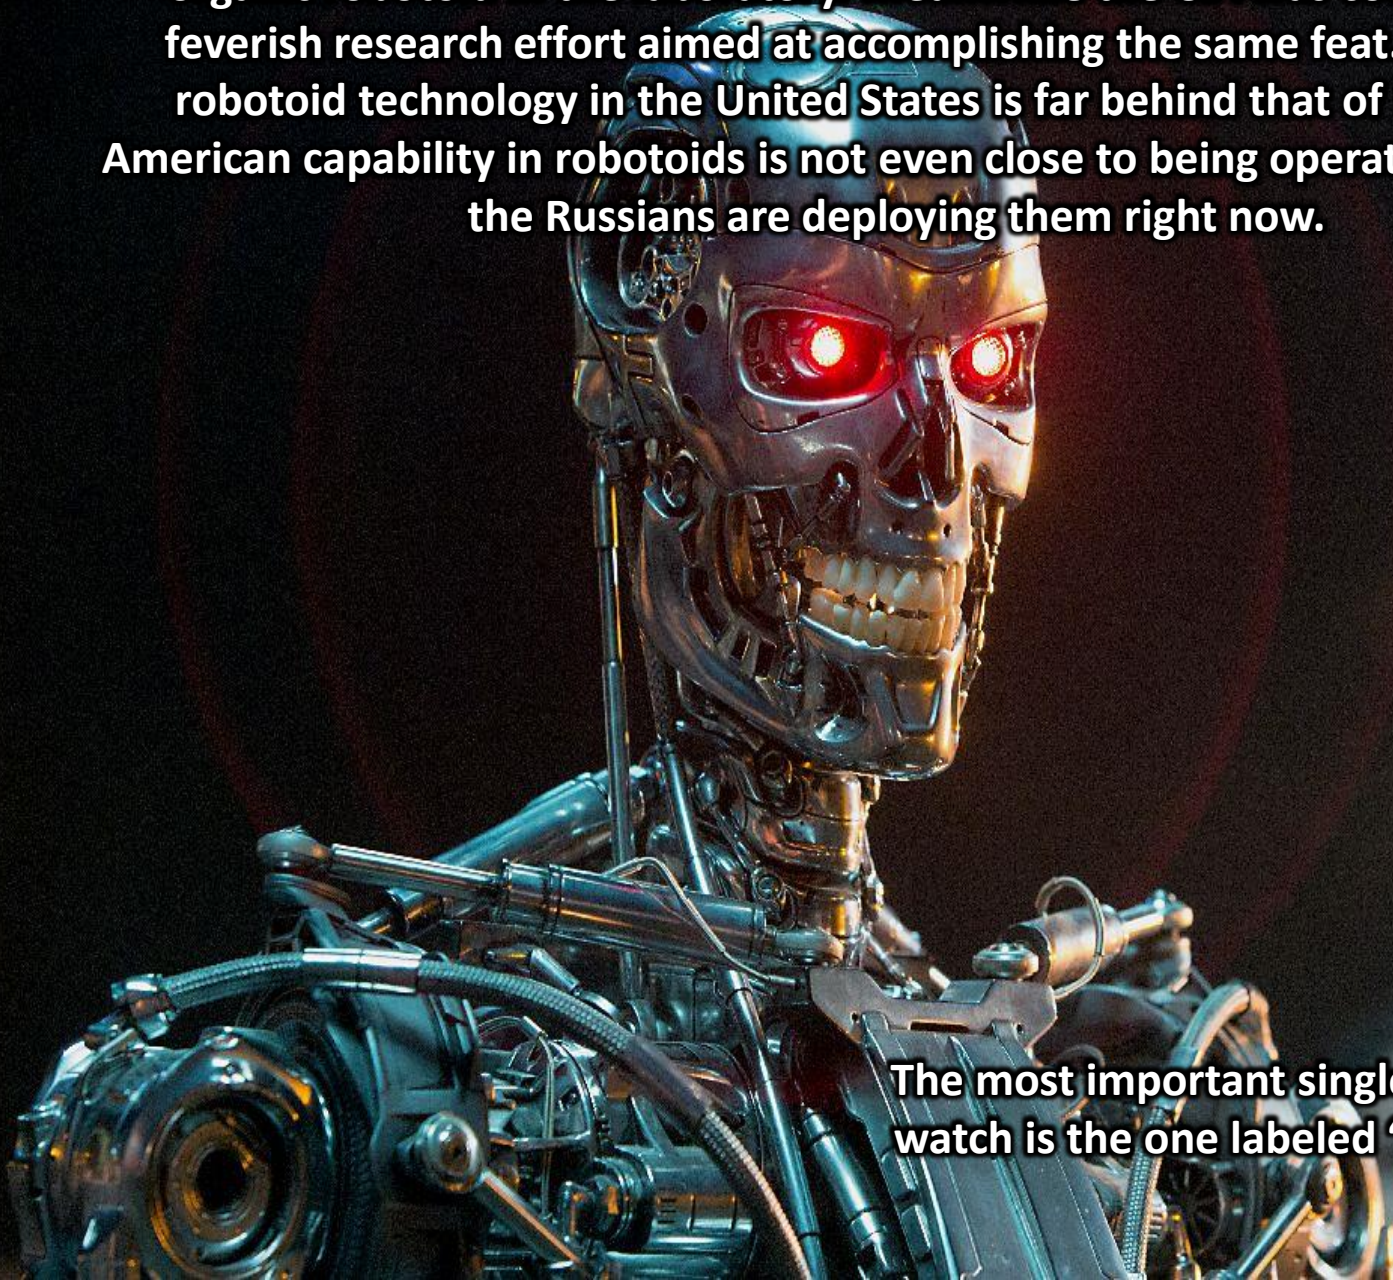

They don't grow or reproduce but must be manufactured one by one in the desired form. They also have a very limited life span, measured in months or even weeks, depending upon how they are utilized.

This is due to the fact that their metabolism, while it resembles that of humans, is very inefficient. A robotoid can be manufactured on very short notice, a matter of hours; but after a few weeks or months it suddenly begins to degenerate physically and mentally.

Organic robotoids are extremely expensive, troublesome creatures to produce and utilize; and robotoid capabilities do not exceed those of human beings. All they can really do is simulate human beings; but, my friends, for Intelligence purposes that's all they have to do! To produce an organic robotoid it is necessary to have a pattern to go by. The pattern required is that of genetic coding taken from a few cells from the body of a human being. In this respect the Russian technique sounds like cloning, but the technique itself is totally unrelated to genuine cloning. A robotoid is produced within a matter of hours, and it simulates the human donor at his current age. Like any man-made copy of anything, a robotoid is never a perfect copy of the human that is to be simulated; there's always small discrepancies in appearance and behavior, but these are seldom great enough to arouse any suspicion.

By early 1975 the Russians were known to have successfully created at least one organic robotoid in the laboratory. Meanwhile the CIA was coordinating a feverish research effort aimed at accomplishing the same feat. Up to now, robotoid technology in the United States is far behind that of Russia. The American capability in robotoids is not even close to being operational, whereas the Russians are deploying them right now.

The most important single personality to watch is the one labeled "Jimmy Carter."

1977

July 1979 – No bags under eyes, more squared up nose.

Periodically there will be small changes in his appearance and behavior as one robotoid wears out and is replaced by another; and by listening to the Carter robotoid, you can get some hints about what the Kremlin is up to.

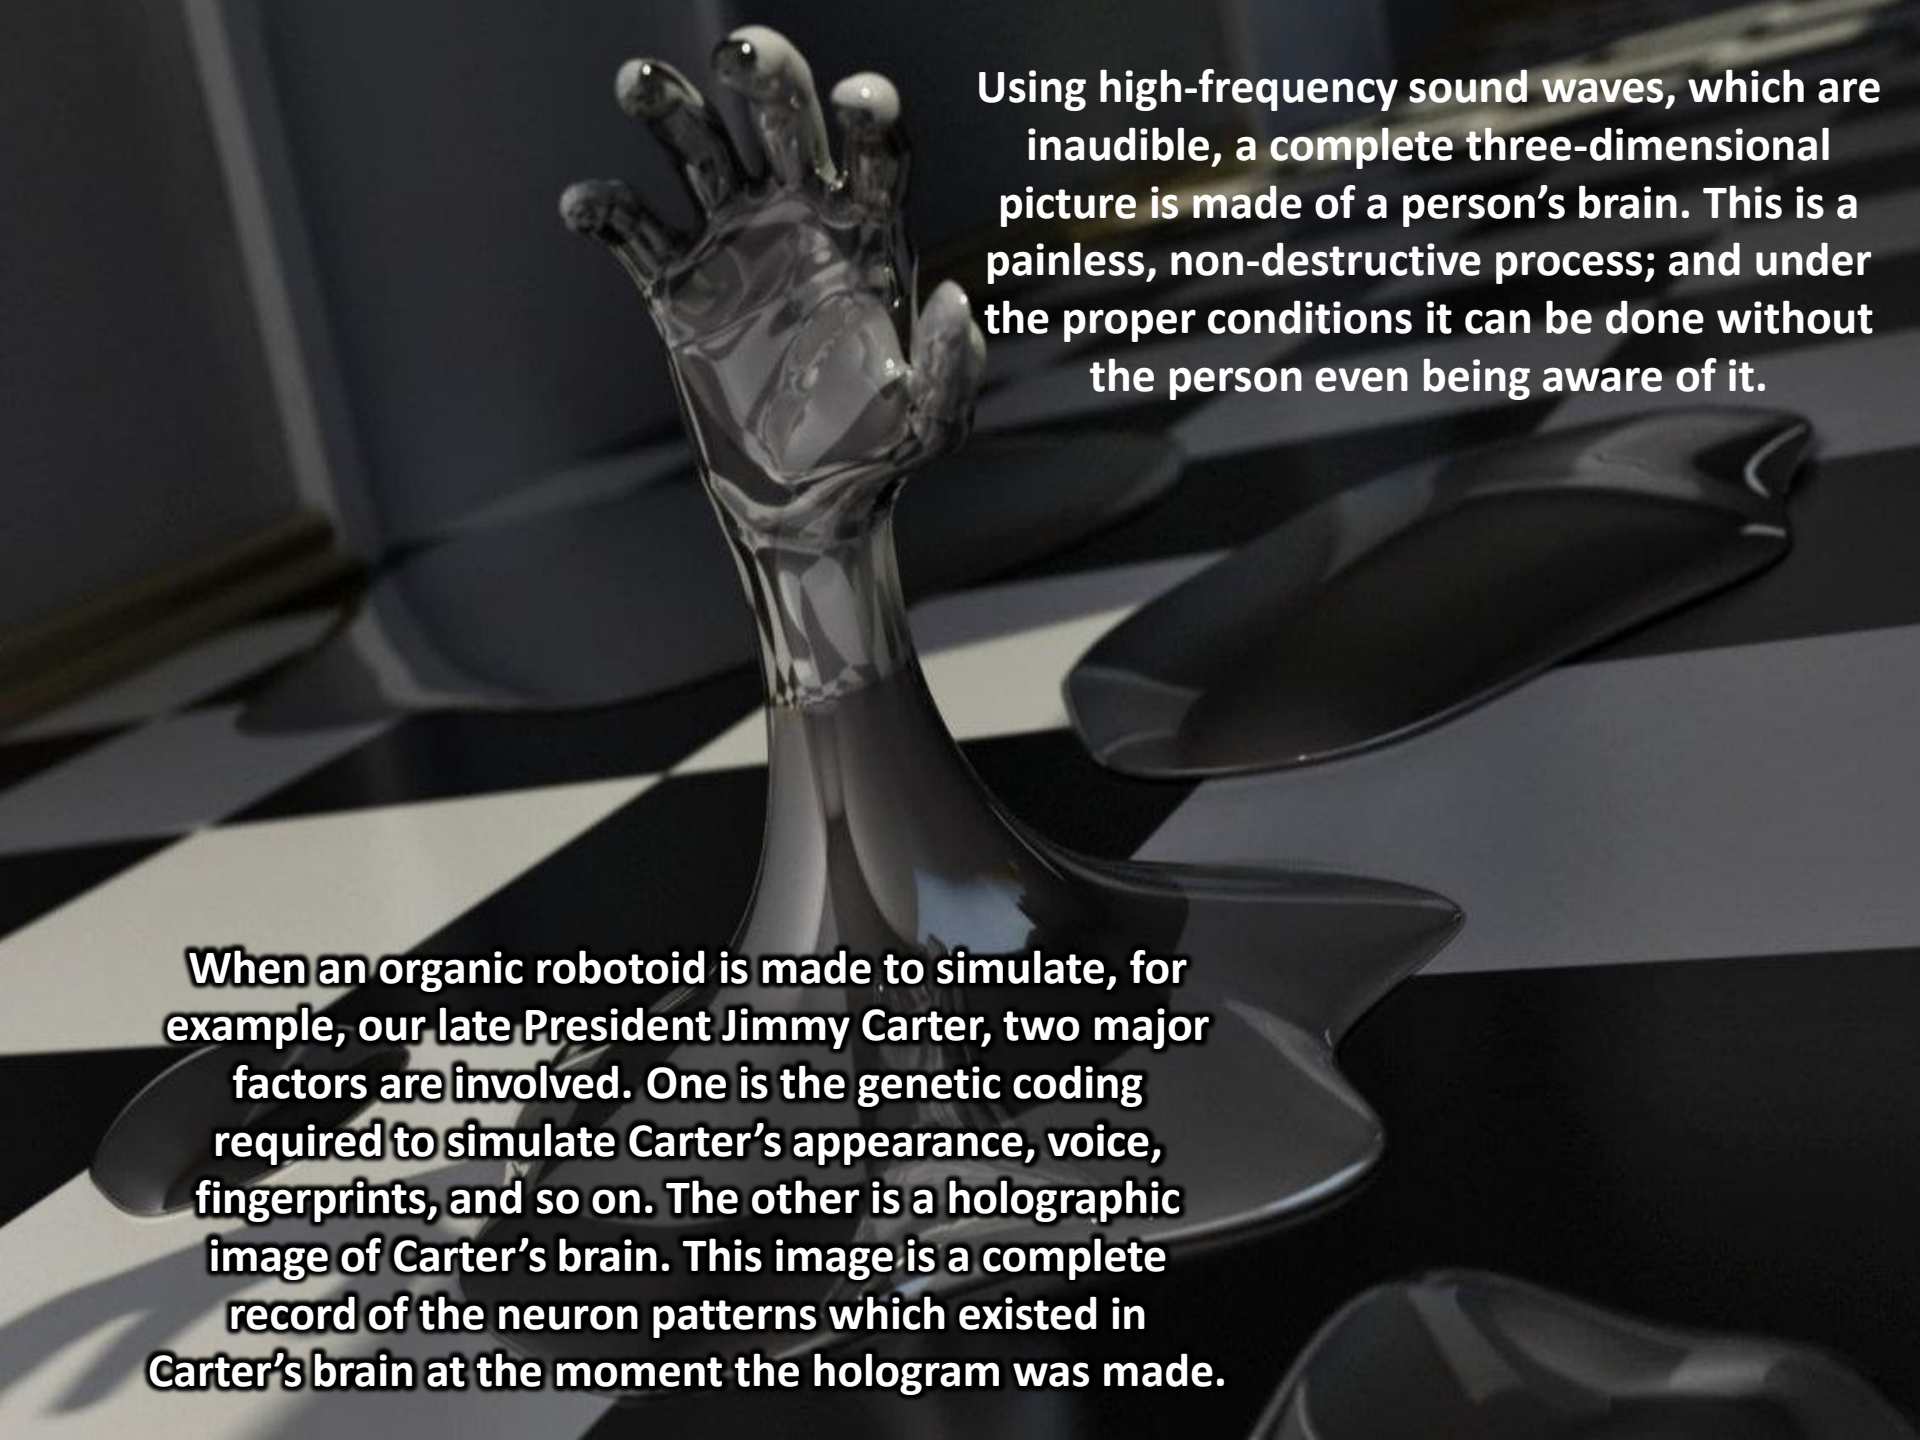

President Carter, Vice-President Mondale, and their wives had fallen victim to this war of “doubles” as their Easter breaks, away from Washington were ending. Now I’m sorry to report that Amy Carter, Billy Carter, Lillian Carter, and Hugh Carter all died soon after Jimmy and Rosalyn did.

the Russians can manufacture organic robotoids, which are almost exact carbon copies of real human beings. This is done by a process that simulates the genetic coding of the person to be copied. It sounds a little like cloning, but it's not. A clone of a human would itself be a human, but an organic robotoid is NOT human.

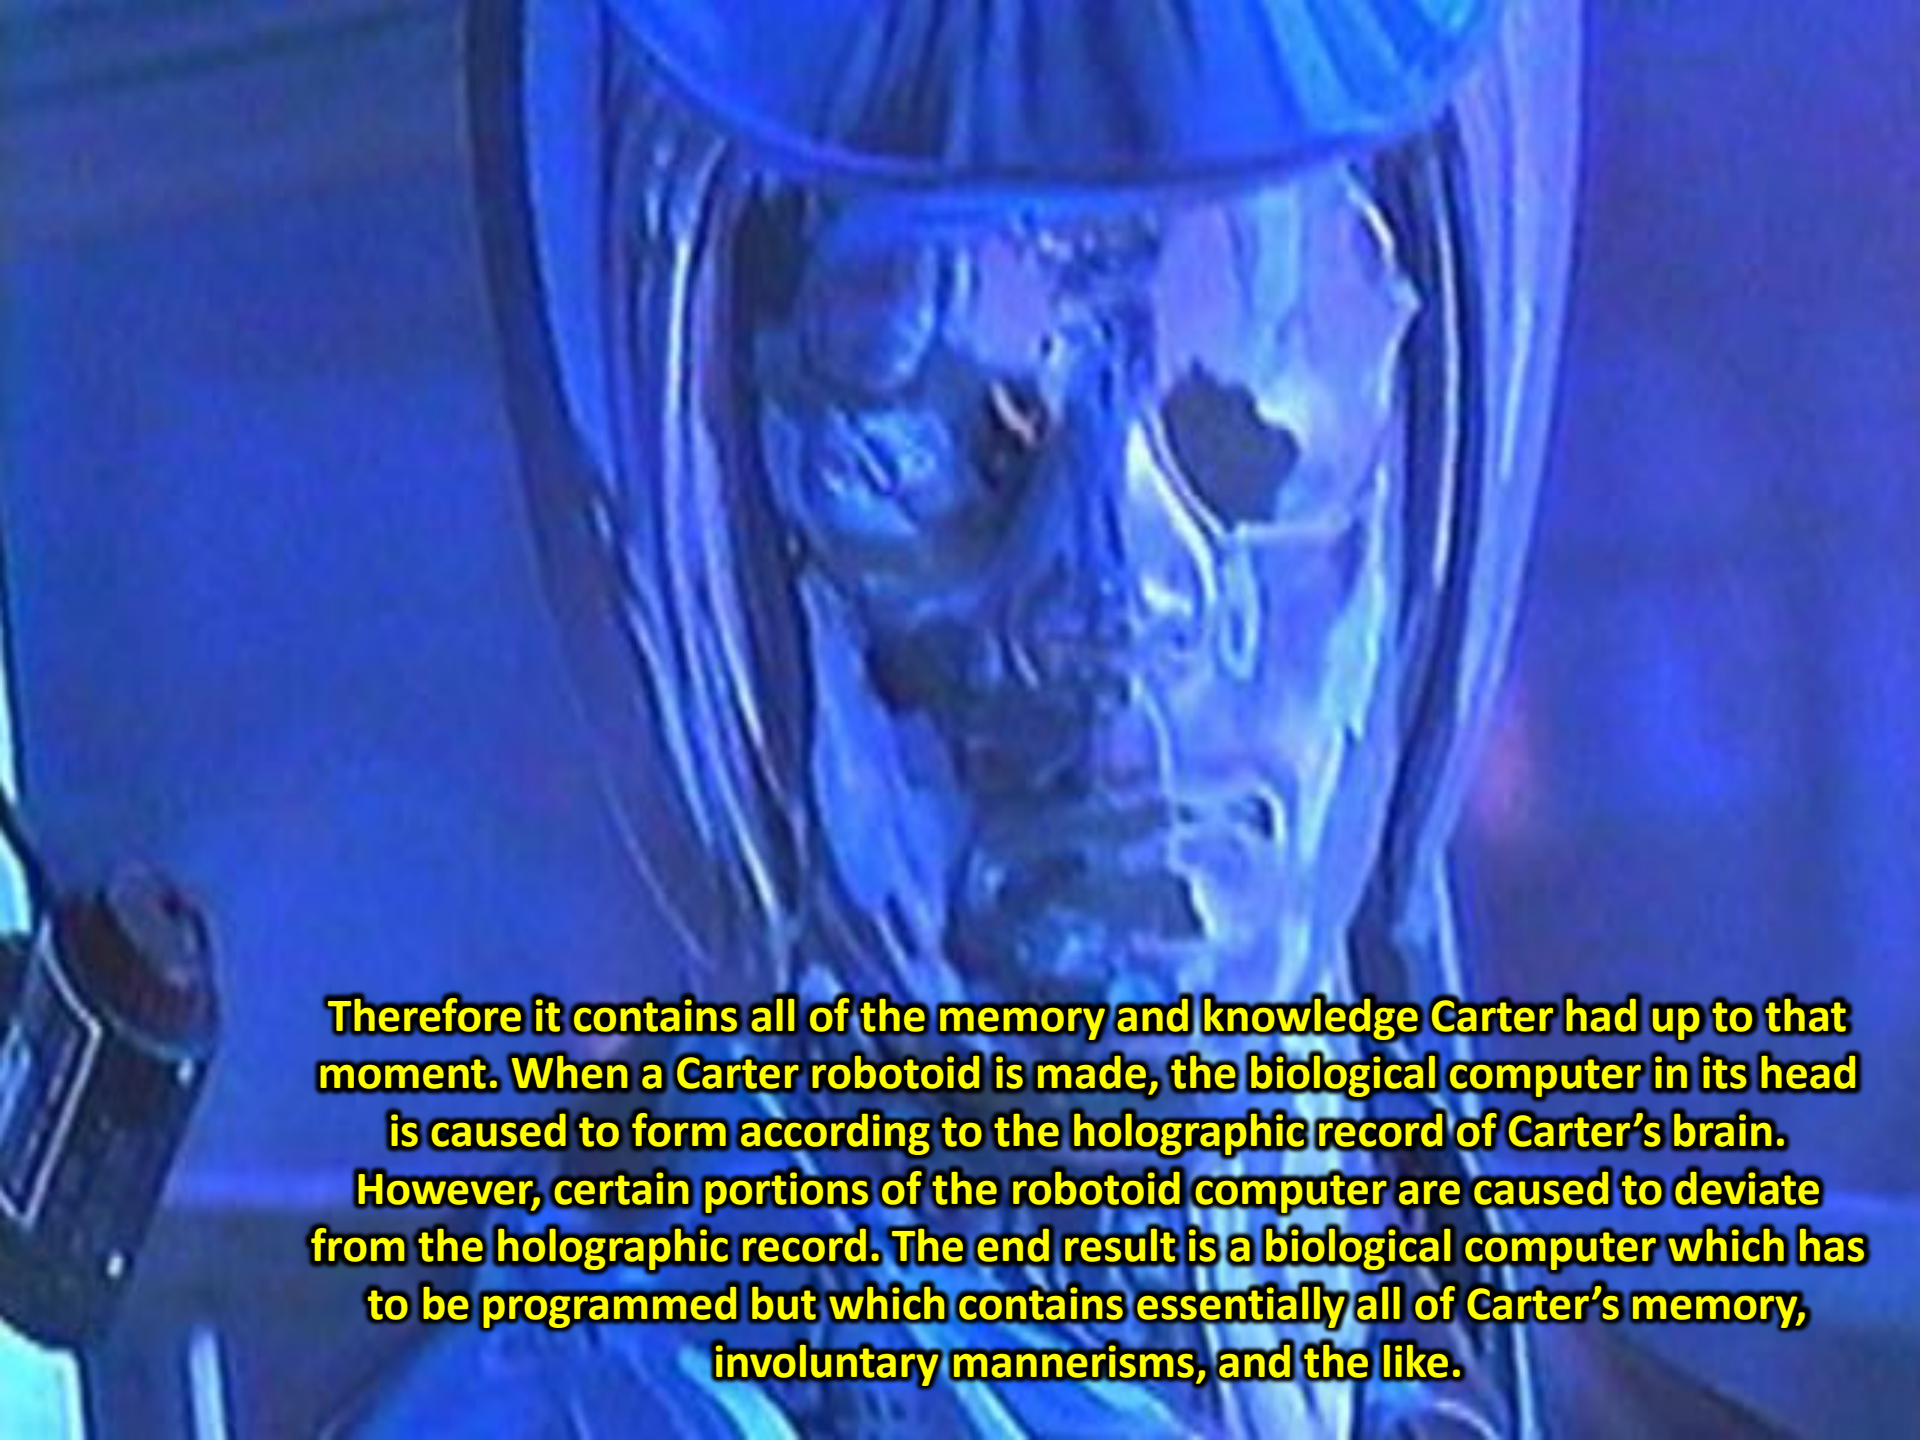

It's an artificial life form, like an animal in some ways but like a computerized machine in others. Every Russian robotoid has what is called a "holographic brain." This brain duplicates essentially the entire memory of a person being copied.

The key to doing this is a new technique called an "ultrasonic cerebral hologram."

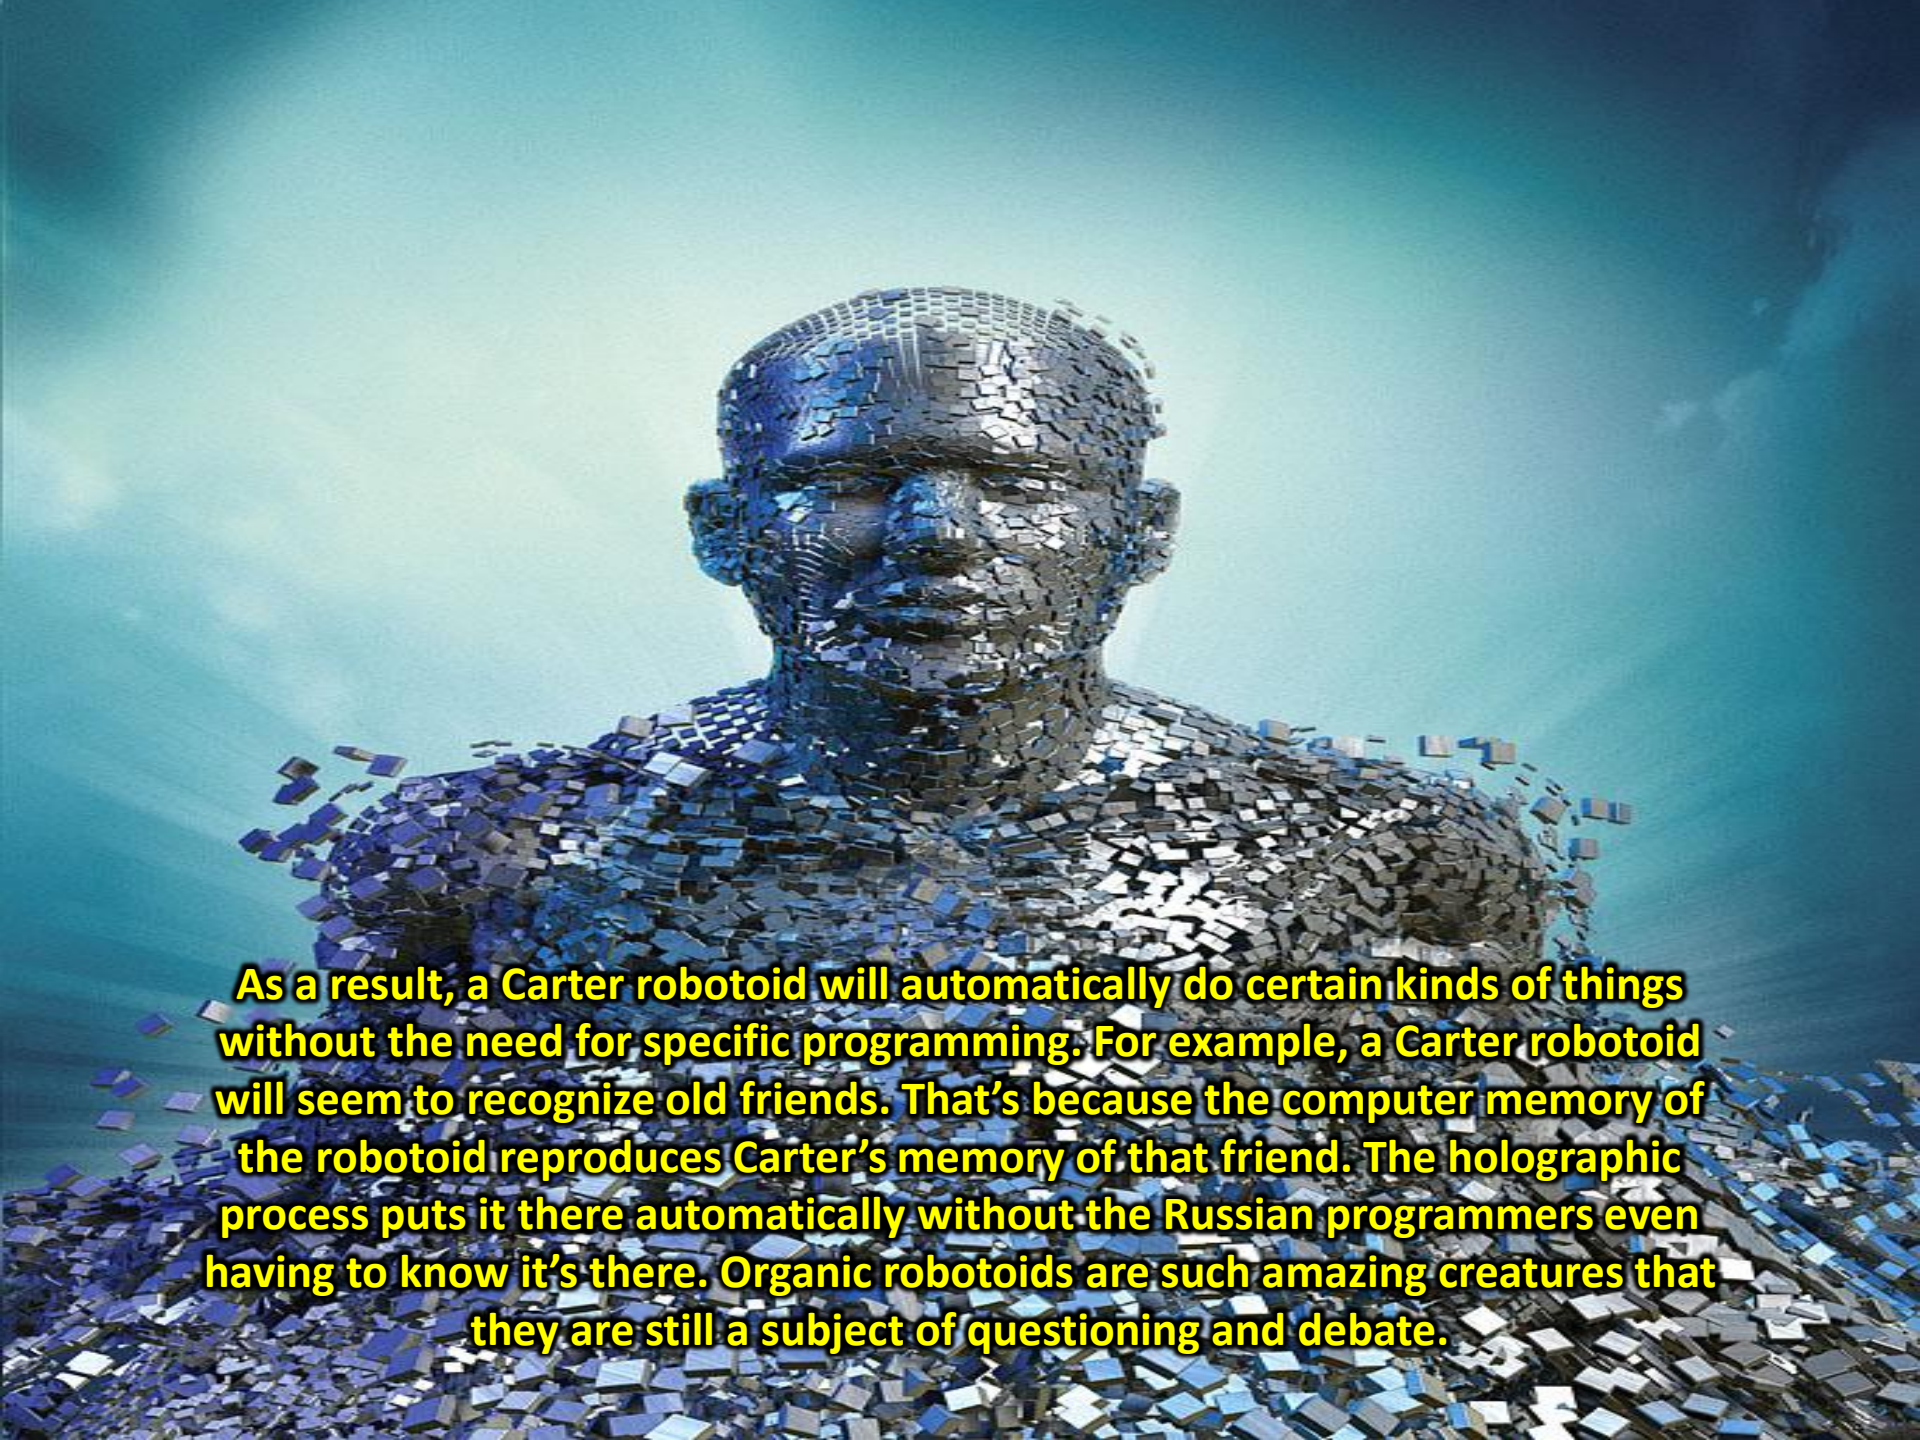

Using high-frequency sound waves, which are inaudible, a complete three-dimensional picture is made of a person's brain. This is a painless, non-destructive process; and under the proper conditions it can be done without the person even being aware of it.

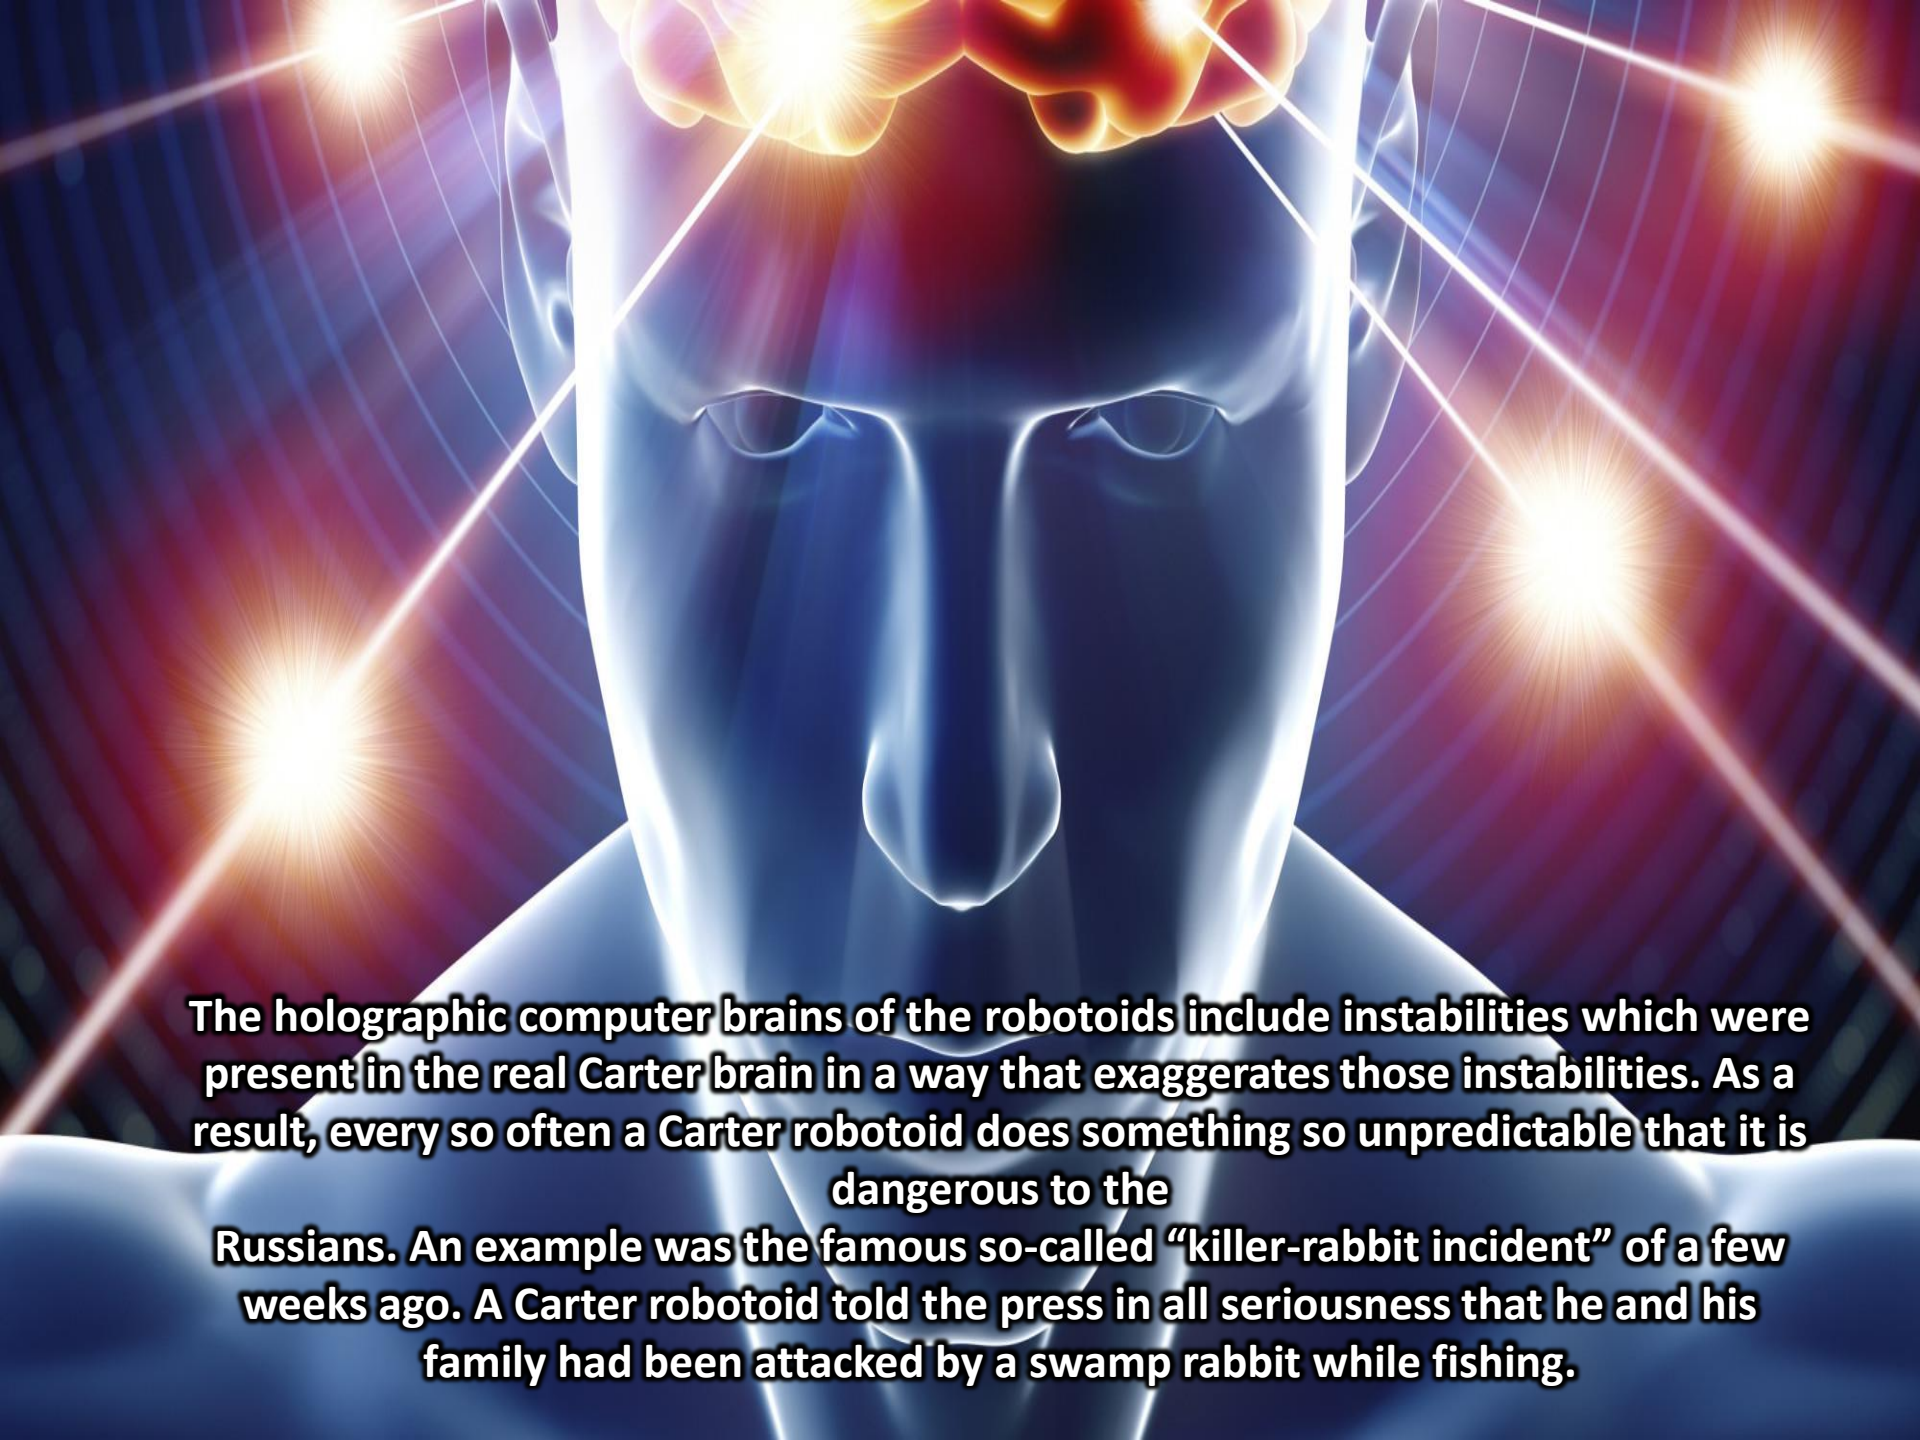

When an organic robotoid is made to simulate, for example, our late President Jimmy Carter, two major factors are involved. One is the genetic coding required to simulate Carter's appearance, voice, fingerprints, and so on. The other is a holographic image of Carter's brain. This image is a complete record of the neuron patterns which existed in Carter's brain at the moment the hologram was made.

Therefore it contains all of the memory and knowledge Carter had up to that moment. When a Carter robotoid is made, the biological computer in its head is caused to form according to the holographic record of Carter's brain. However, certain portions of the robotoid computer are caused to deviate from the holographic record. The end result is a biological computer which has to be programmed but which contains essentially all of Carter's memory, involuntary mannerisms, and the like.

As a result, a Carter robotoid will automatically do certain kinds of things without the need for specific programming. For example, a Carter robotoid will seem to recognize old friends. That's because the computer memory of the robotoid reproduces Carter's memory of that friend. The holographic process puts it there automatically without the Russian programmers even having to know it's there. Organic robotoids are such amazing creatures that they are still a subject of questioning and debate.

The holographic computer brains of the robotoids include instabilities which were present in the real Carter brain in a way that exaggerates those instabilities. As a result, every so often a Carter robotoid does something so unpredictable that it is dangerous to the Russians. An example was the famous so-called “killer-rabbit incident” of a few weeks ago. A Carter robotoid told the press in all seriousness that he and his family had been attacked by a swamp rabbit while fishing.

Carter Fights 'Killer Rabbit' With Paddle On Fishing Trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — A "killer rabbit" attacked President Carter on a recent trip to Plains, Ga., penetrating Secret Service security and forcing the chief executive to beat back the beast with a canoe paddle.

The rabbit, which the president later to believe the story of the aquatic attack rabbit when Carter related it to them later. Their skepticism arose despite Carter's strong and oft-repeated promises never to lie.

"Everybody knows rabbits don't swim,"

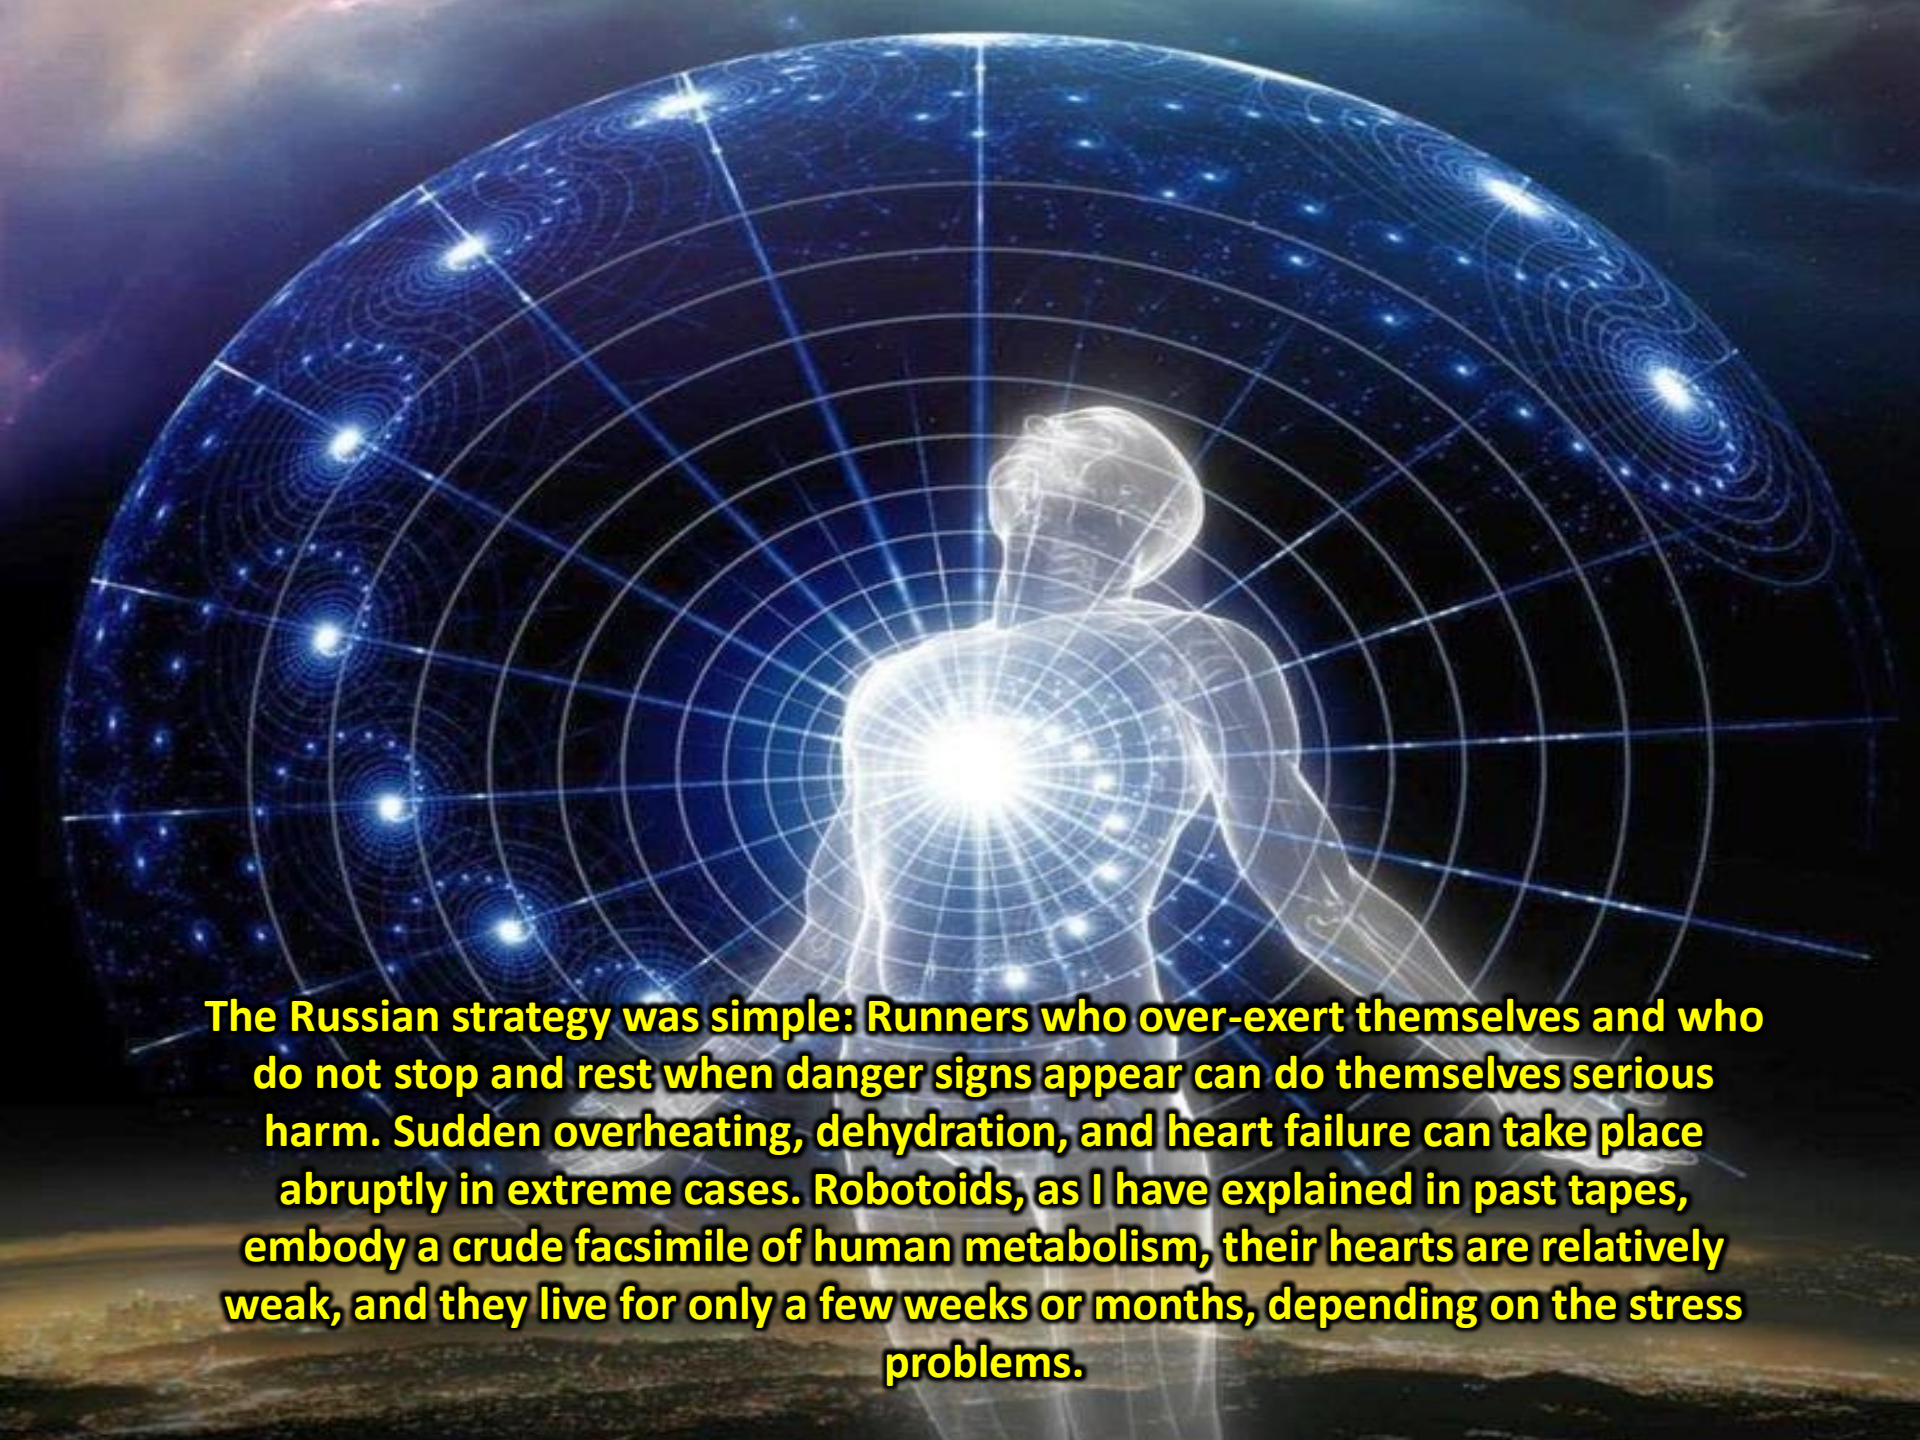

President Carter

Killer Rabbit

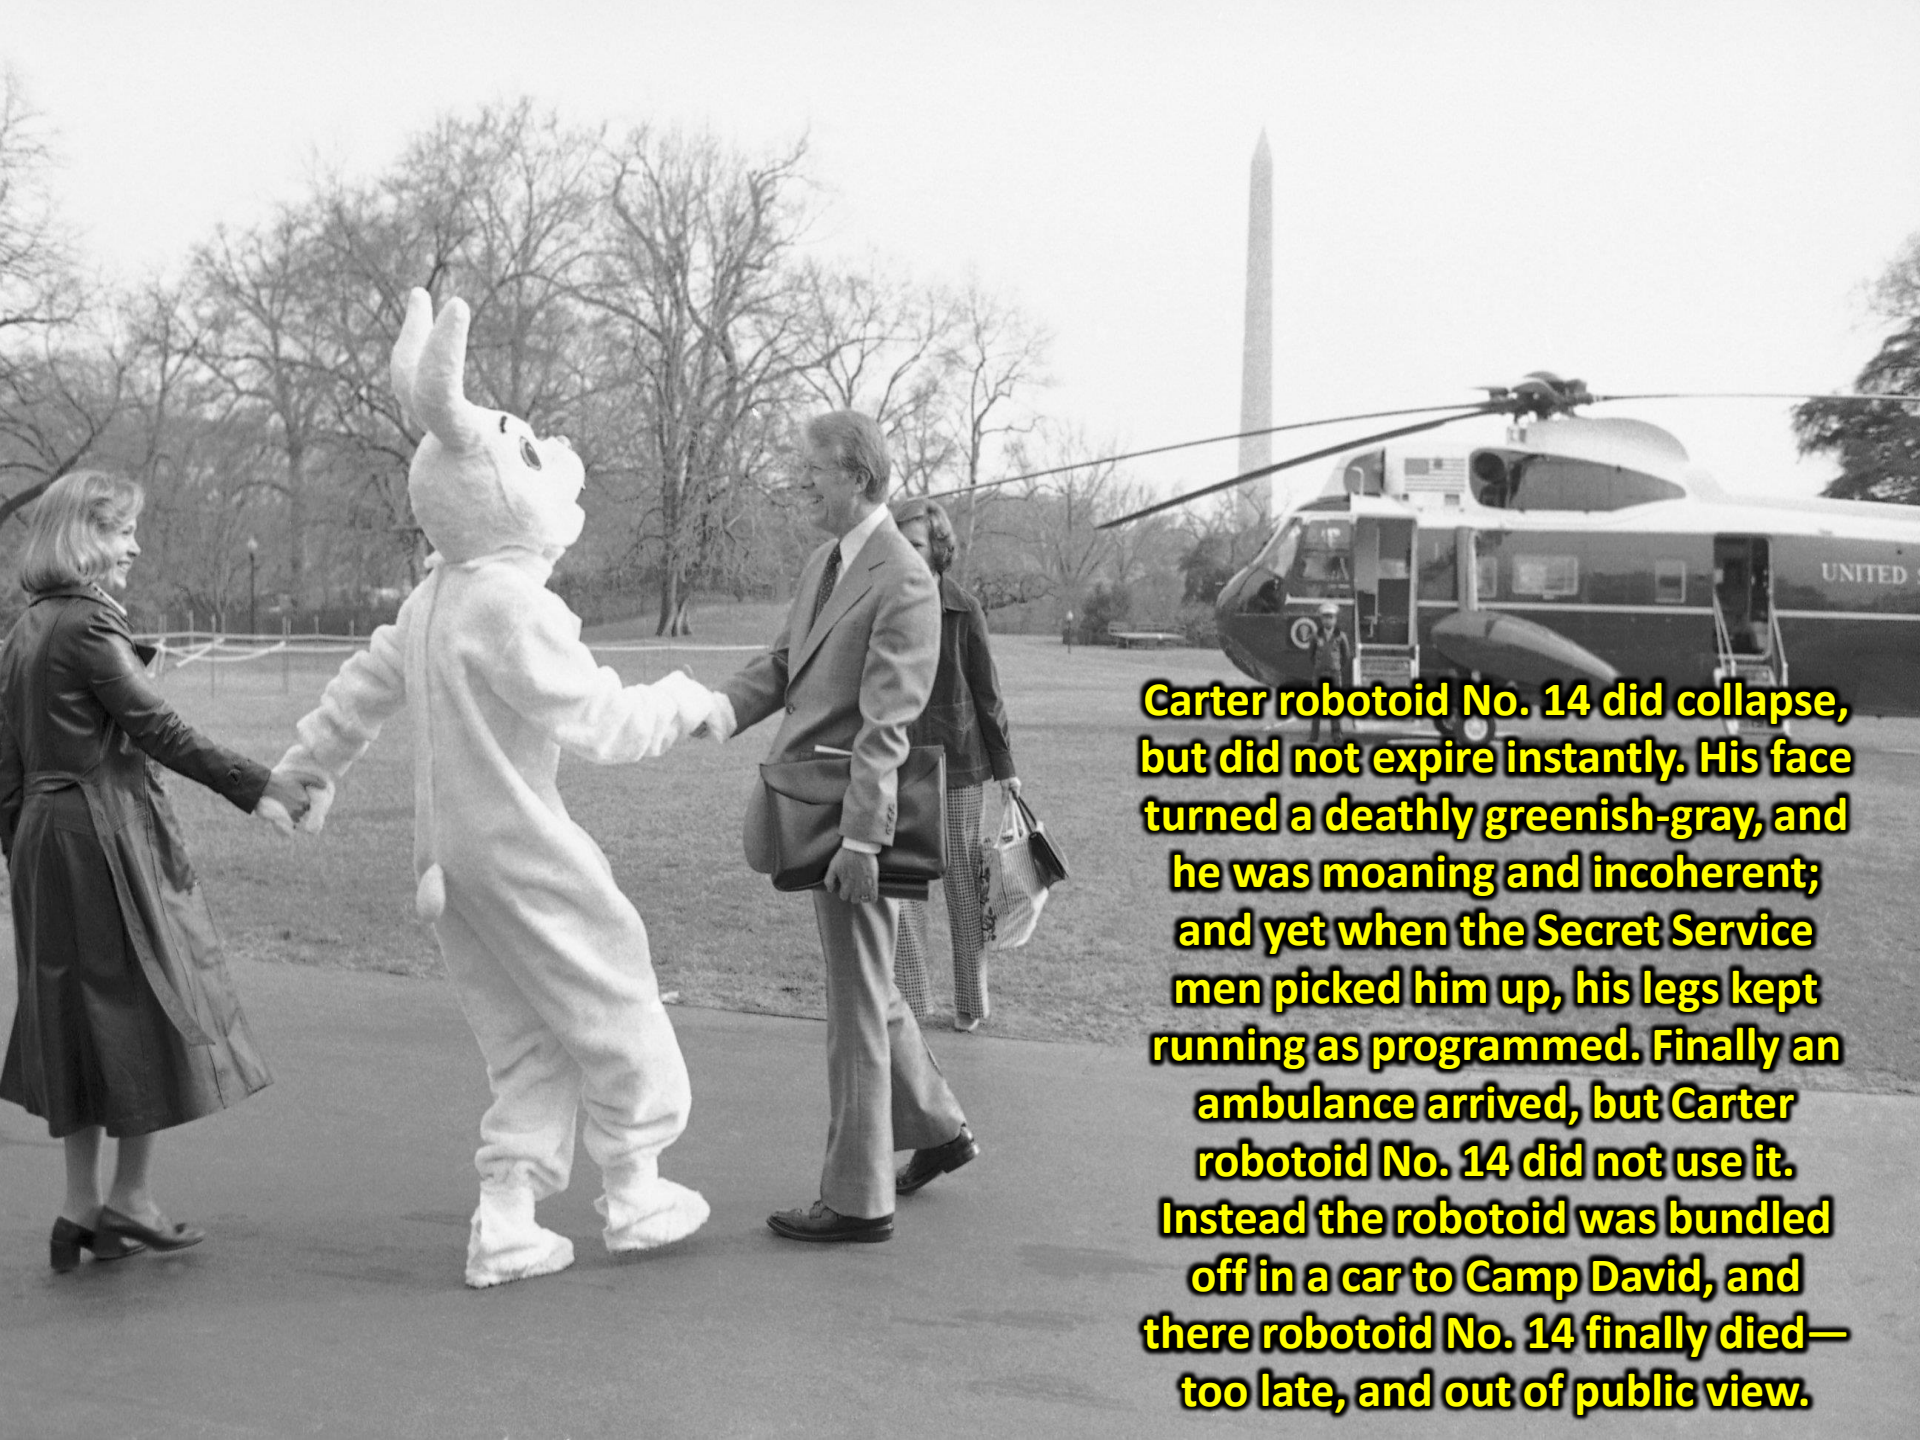

The Russians want to rid themselves of the nerve-racking problem of the unstable Carter robotoids. Earlier this month, on September 15, an attempt was made to do just that. The alleged President Carter was entered in a foot race, of all things, in the Catocin Mountains near Camp David. It was a strenuous six-mile course which included much uphill running. Carter robotoid No. 14 was programmed to run at maximum speed and not to let up for any reason.

A glowing human figure is centered in the frame, with a bright white light emanating from the chest area. The figure is overlaid on a blue grid pattern that resembles a celestial or scientific chart. The background is a dark space filled with stars and nebulae. The overall image has a futuristic and scientific aesthetic.

The Russian strategy was simple: Runners who over-exert themselves and who do not stop and rest when danger signs appear can do themselves serious harm. Sudden overheating, dehydration, and heart failure can take place abruptly in extreme cases. Robotoids, as I have explained in past tapes, embody a crude facsimile of human metabolism, their hearts are relatively weak, and they live for only a few weeks or months, depending on the stress problems.

They have no self-preservation instinct, so Carter robotoid No. 14 was programmed to run like the wind. It was expected that suddenly without warning he would suffer complete heart failure, collapse, and die on the spot.

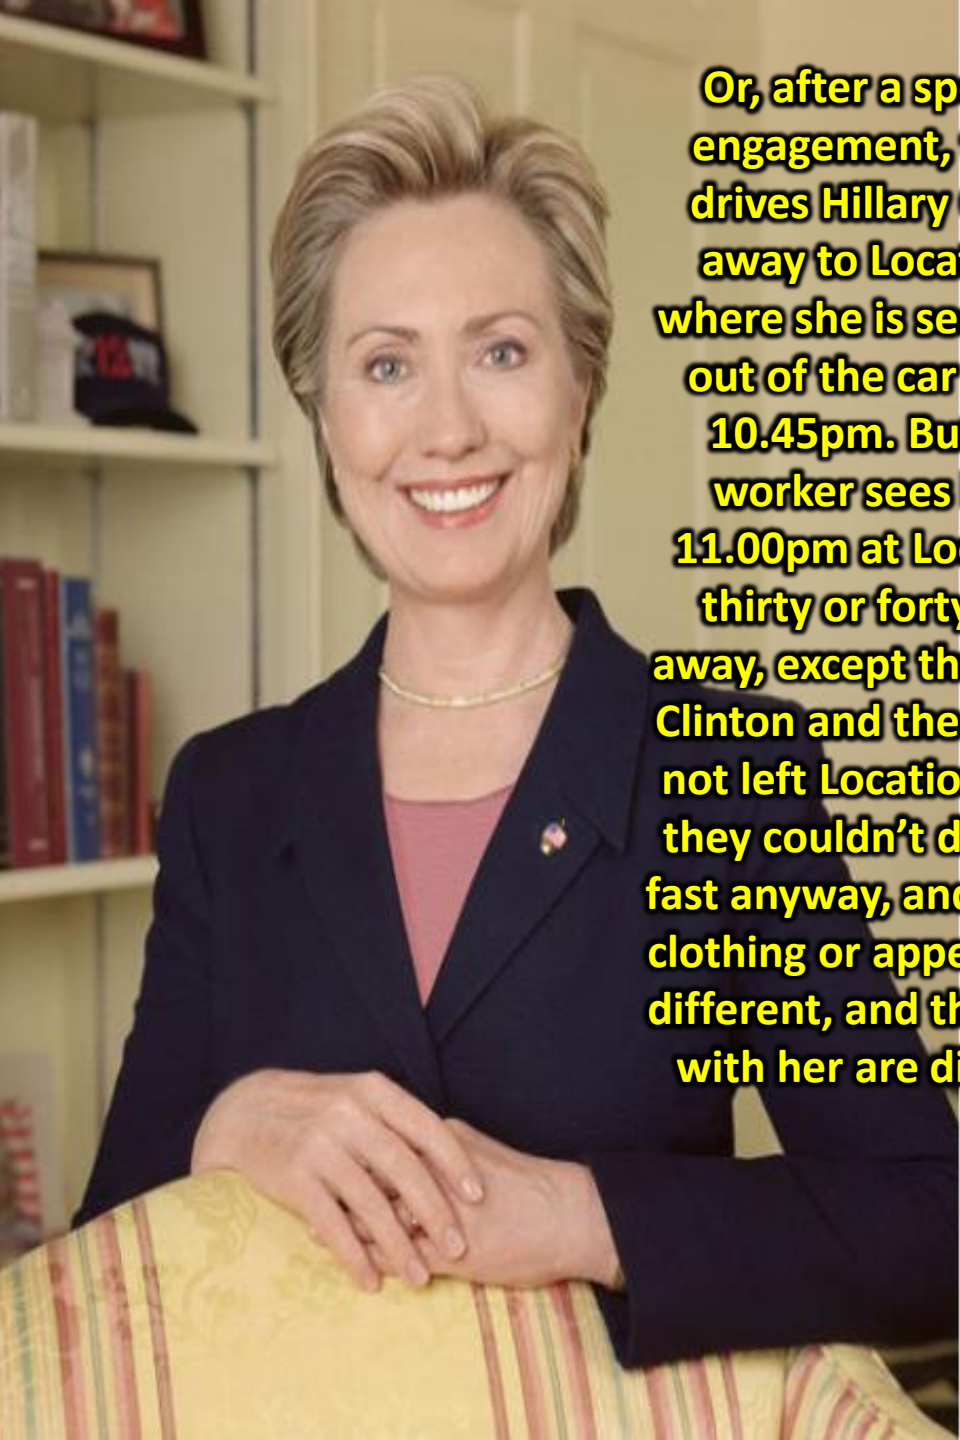

Carter robotoid No. 14 did collapse, but did not expire instantly. His face turned a deathly greenish-gray, and he was moaning and incoherent; and yet when the Secret Service men picked him up, his legs kept running as programmed. Finally an ambulance arrived, but Carter robotoid No. 14 did not use it. Instead the robotoid was bundled off in a car to Camp David, and there robotoid No. 14 finally died—too late, and out of public view.

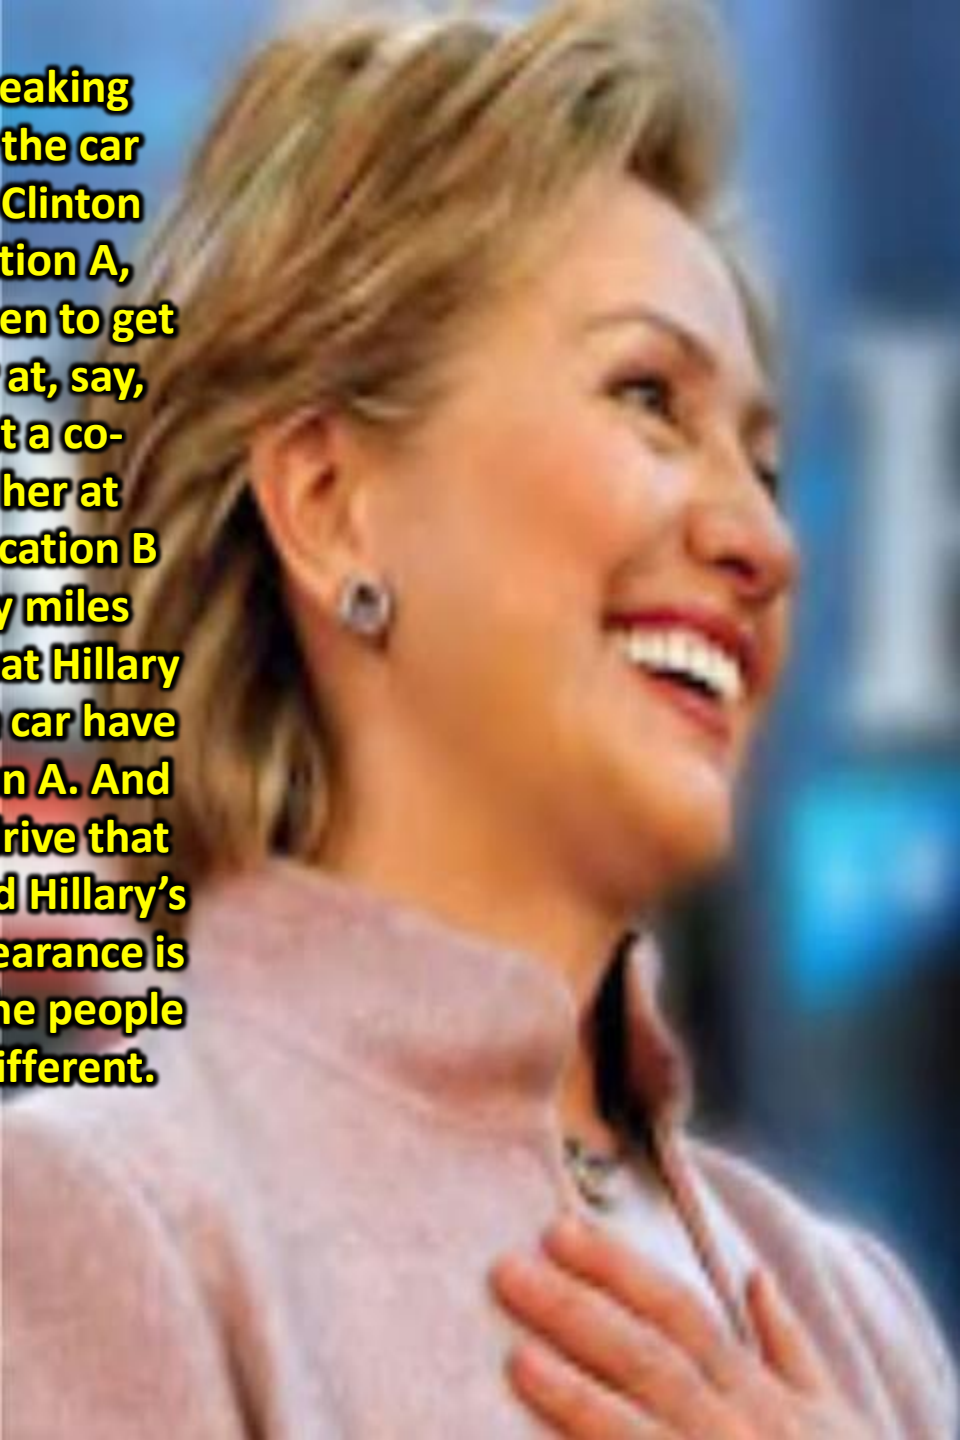

<http://www.theeventchronicle.com/study/bilocation-hillary-clone-clinton/#>

In 2008, during the American presidential election campaign, US Senator Hillary Clinton's handlers began to get clumsy and she was seen in two different places at once on a number of separate occasions. And not just in Iowa and New Hampshire.

Someone sees Hillary Clinton at a function across town at, say, 1.30pm. And then, when they compare notes with a Democratic Party co-worker later that day, they learn that Hillary was also seen back at the hotel at 1.30pm, three miles away. And her clothes were different, or her hair was different, or her makeup was different, and the people with her were different.

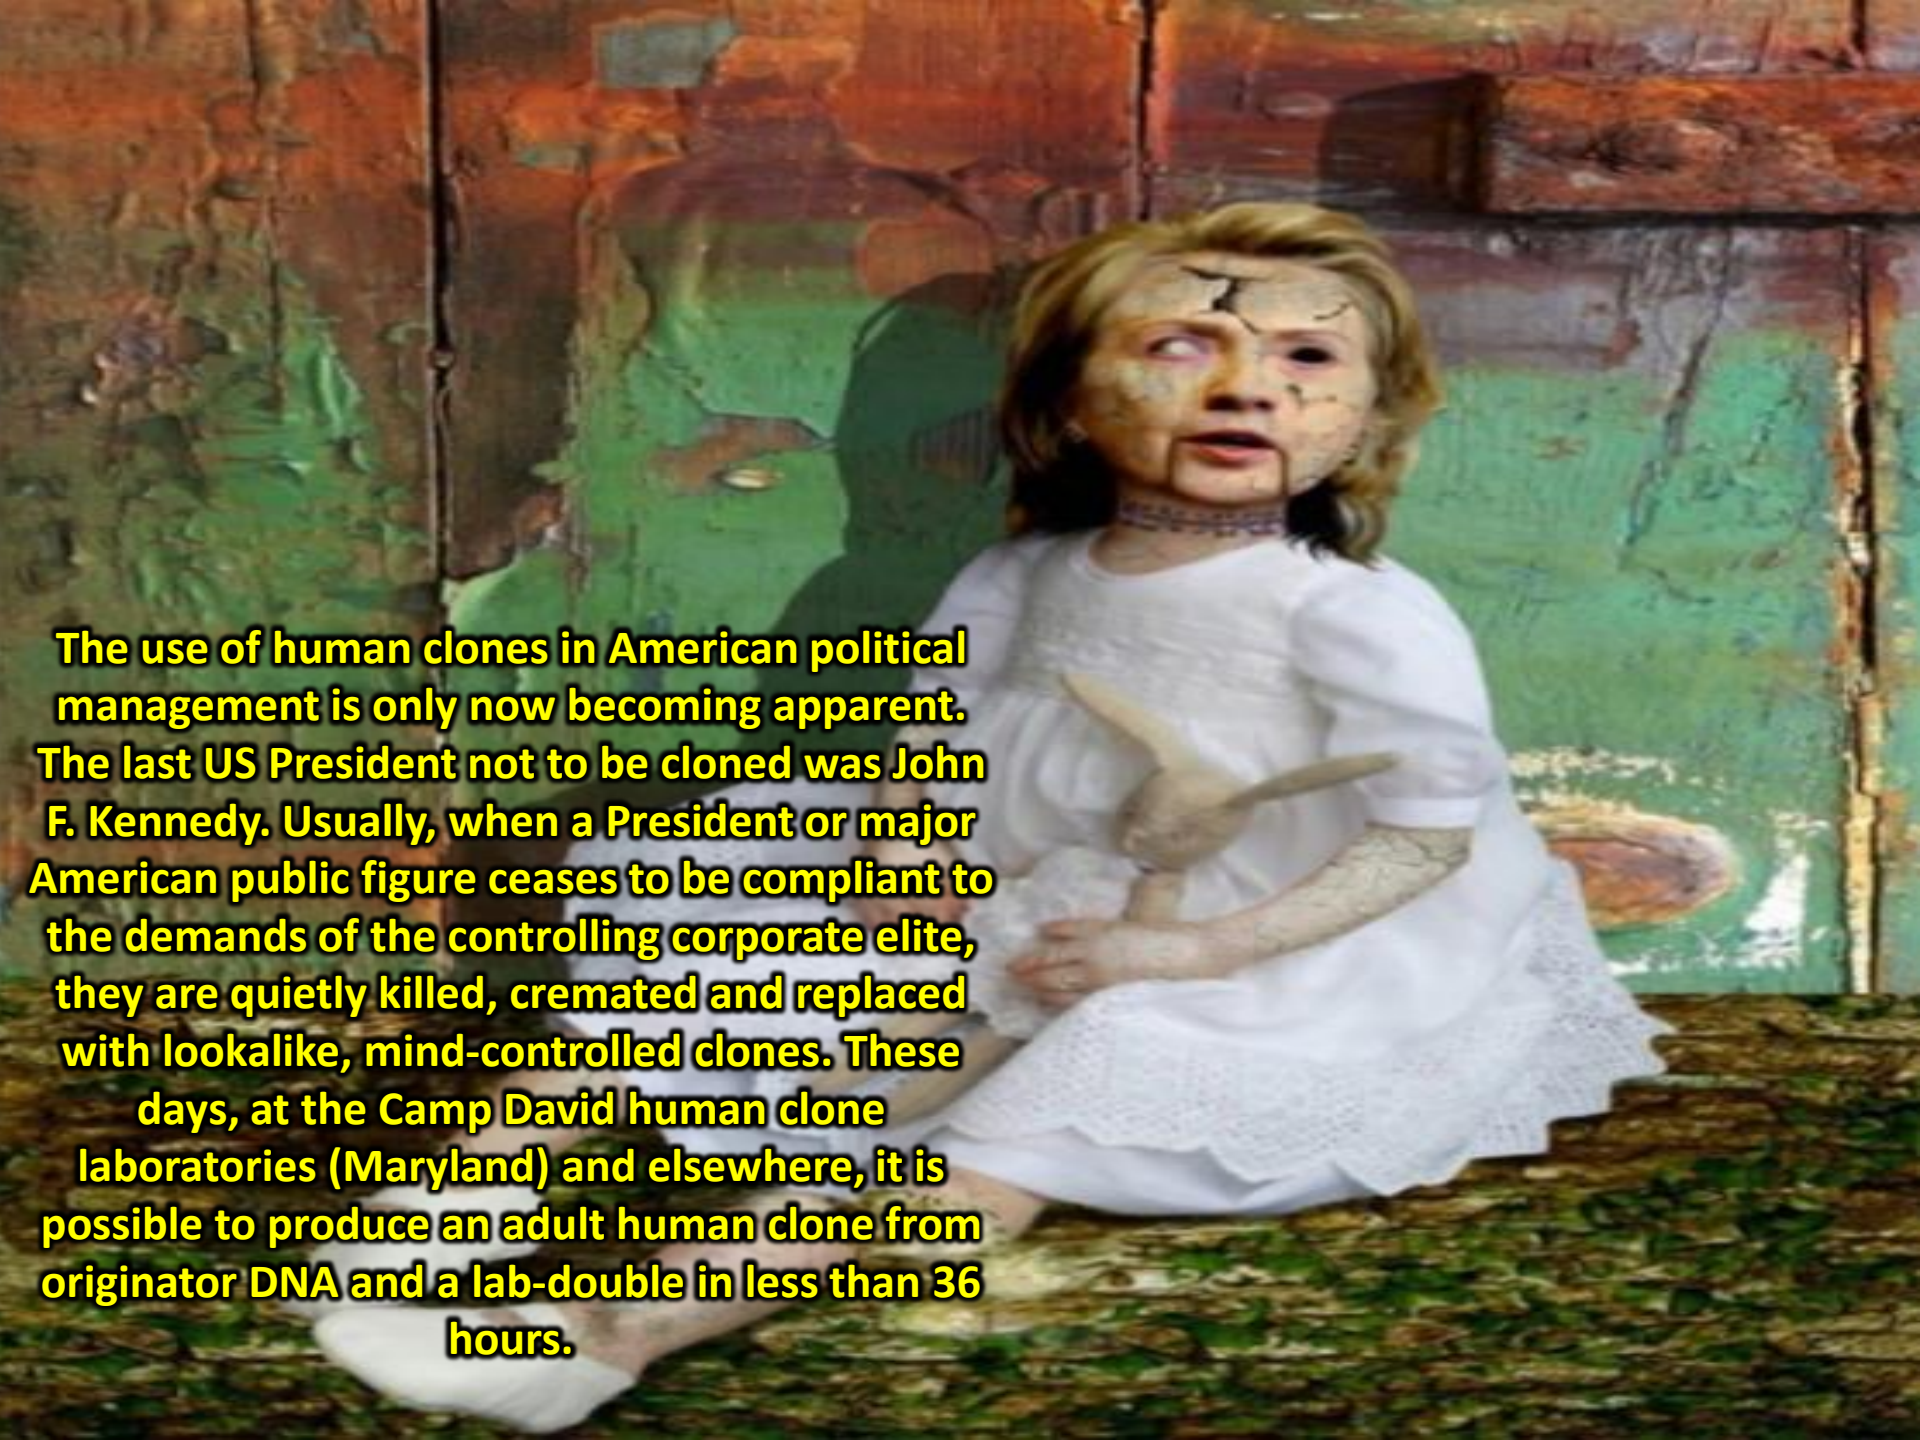

Or, after a speaking engagement, the car drives Hillary Clinton away to Location A, where she is seen to get out of the car at, say, 10.45pm. But a co-worker sees her at 11.00pm at Location B thirty or forty miles away, except that Hillary Clinton and the car have not left Location A. And they couldn't drive that fast anyway, and Hillary's clothing or appearance is different, and the people with her are different.

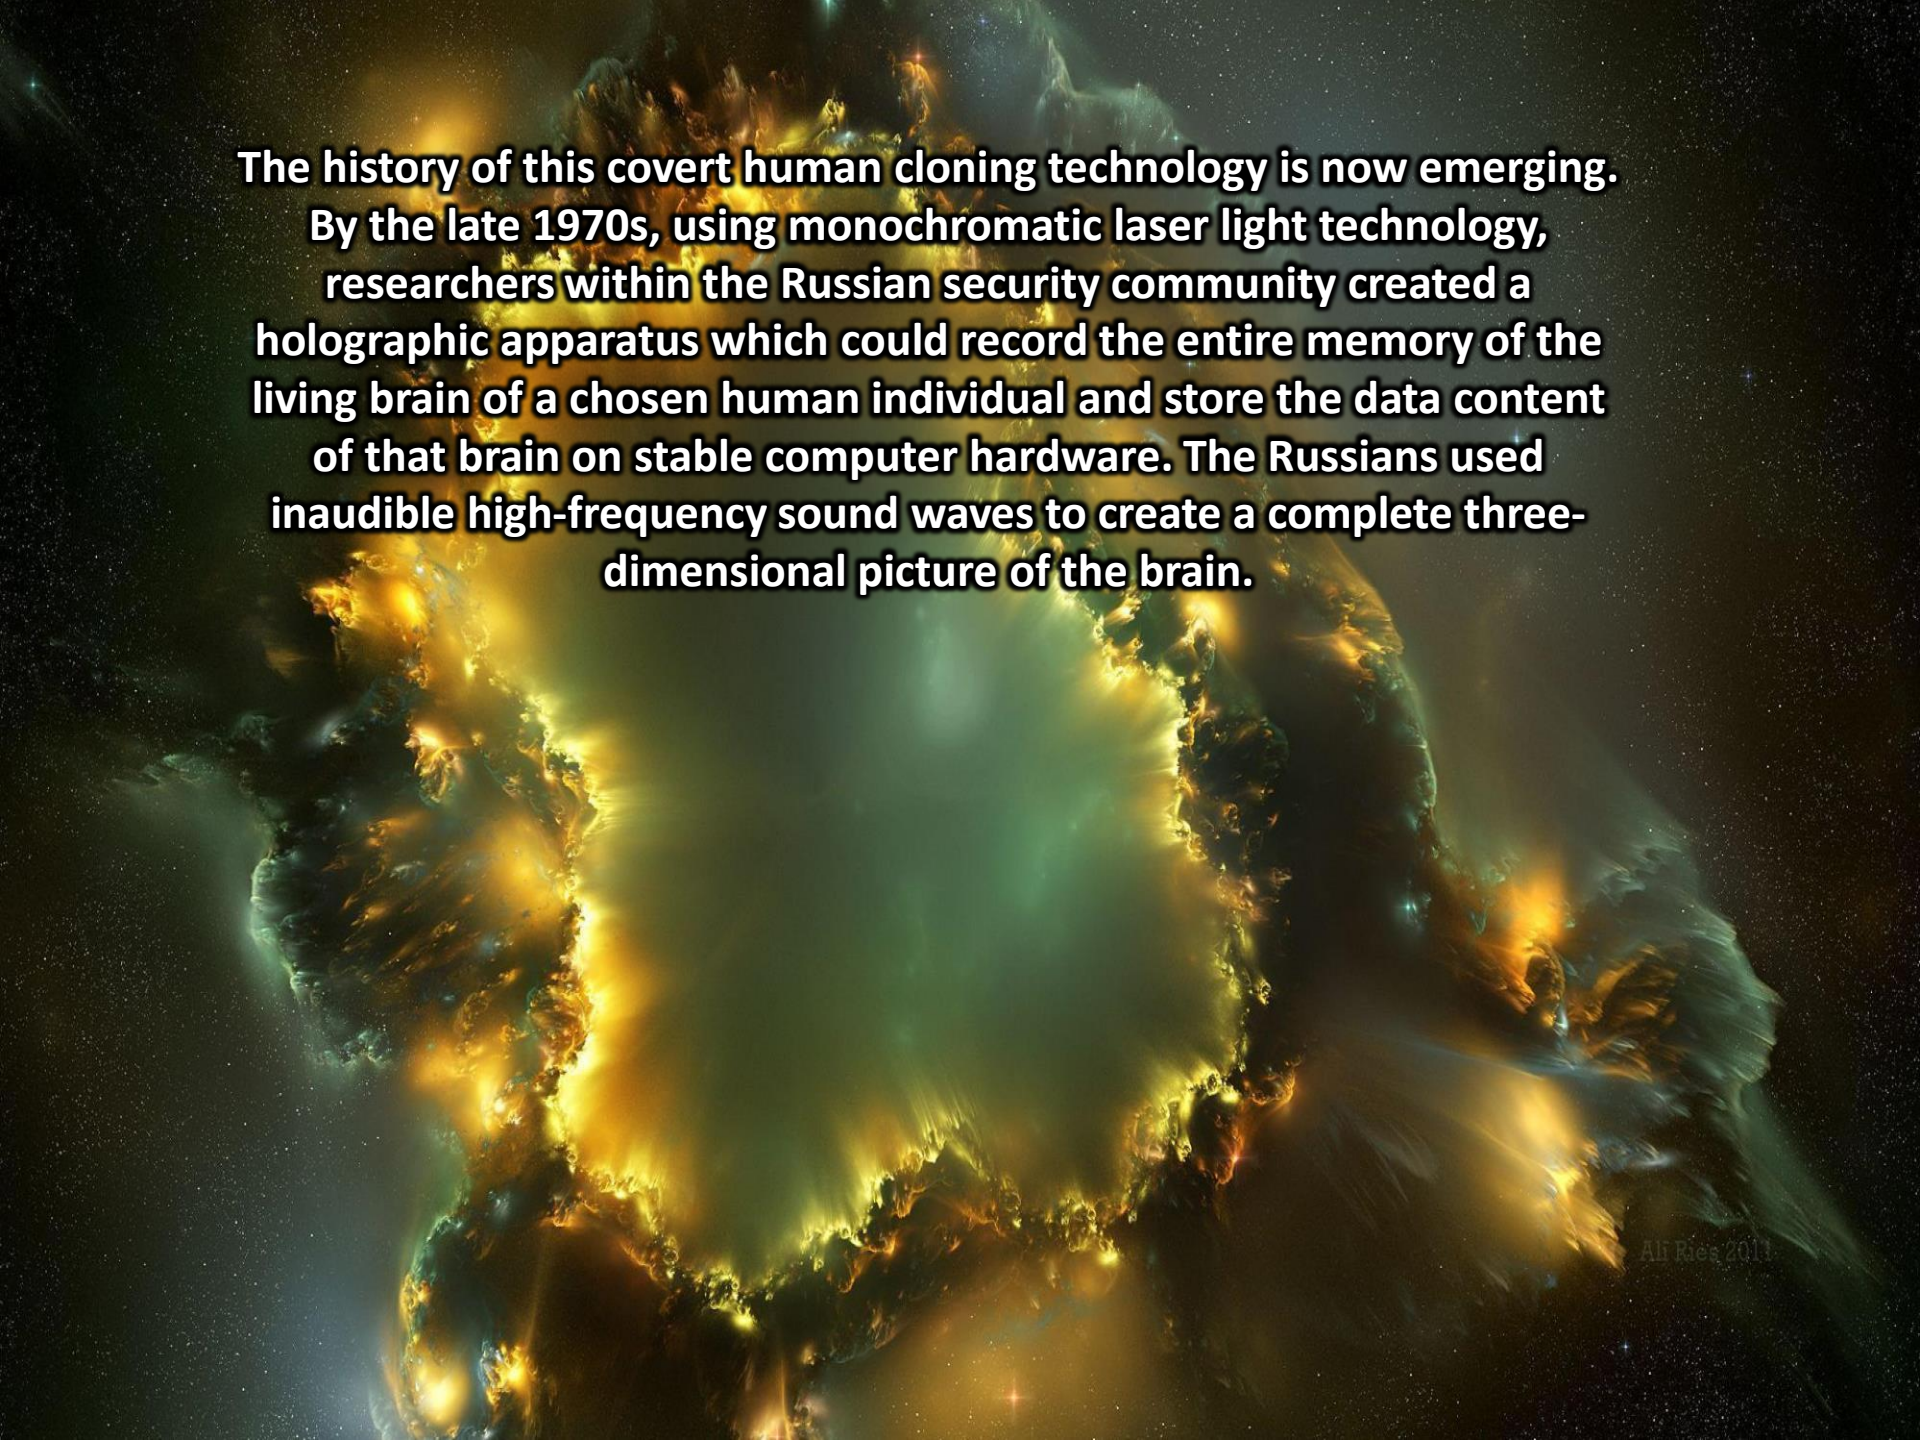

It is suggested that over half the US Presidential hopefuls in 2008 were human clones. There were several of each of them.

A young girl with a doll-like appearance, wearing a white dress and a choker, sitting on a patterned rug in front of a wall with peeling paint. She has a cracked, mask-like face and a small goatee. Her hands are positioned in front of her chest, and she has a slightly distressed or vacant expression.

The use of human clones in American political management is only now becoming apparent. The last US President not to be cloned was John F. Kennedy. Usually, when a President or major American public figure ceases to be compliant to the demands of the controlling corporate elite, they are quietly killed, cremated and replaced with lookalike, mind-controlled clones. These days, at the Camp David human clone laboratories (Maryland) and elsewhere, it is possible to produce an adult human clone from originator DNA and a lab-double in less than 36 hours.

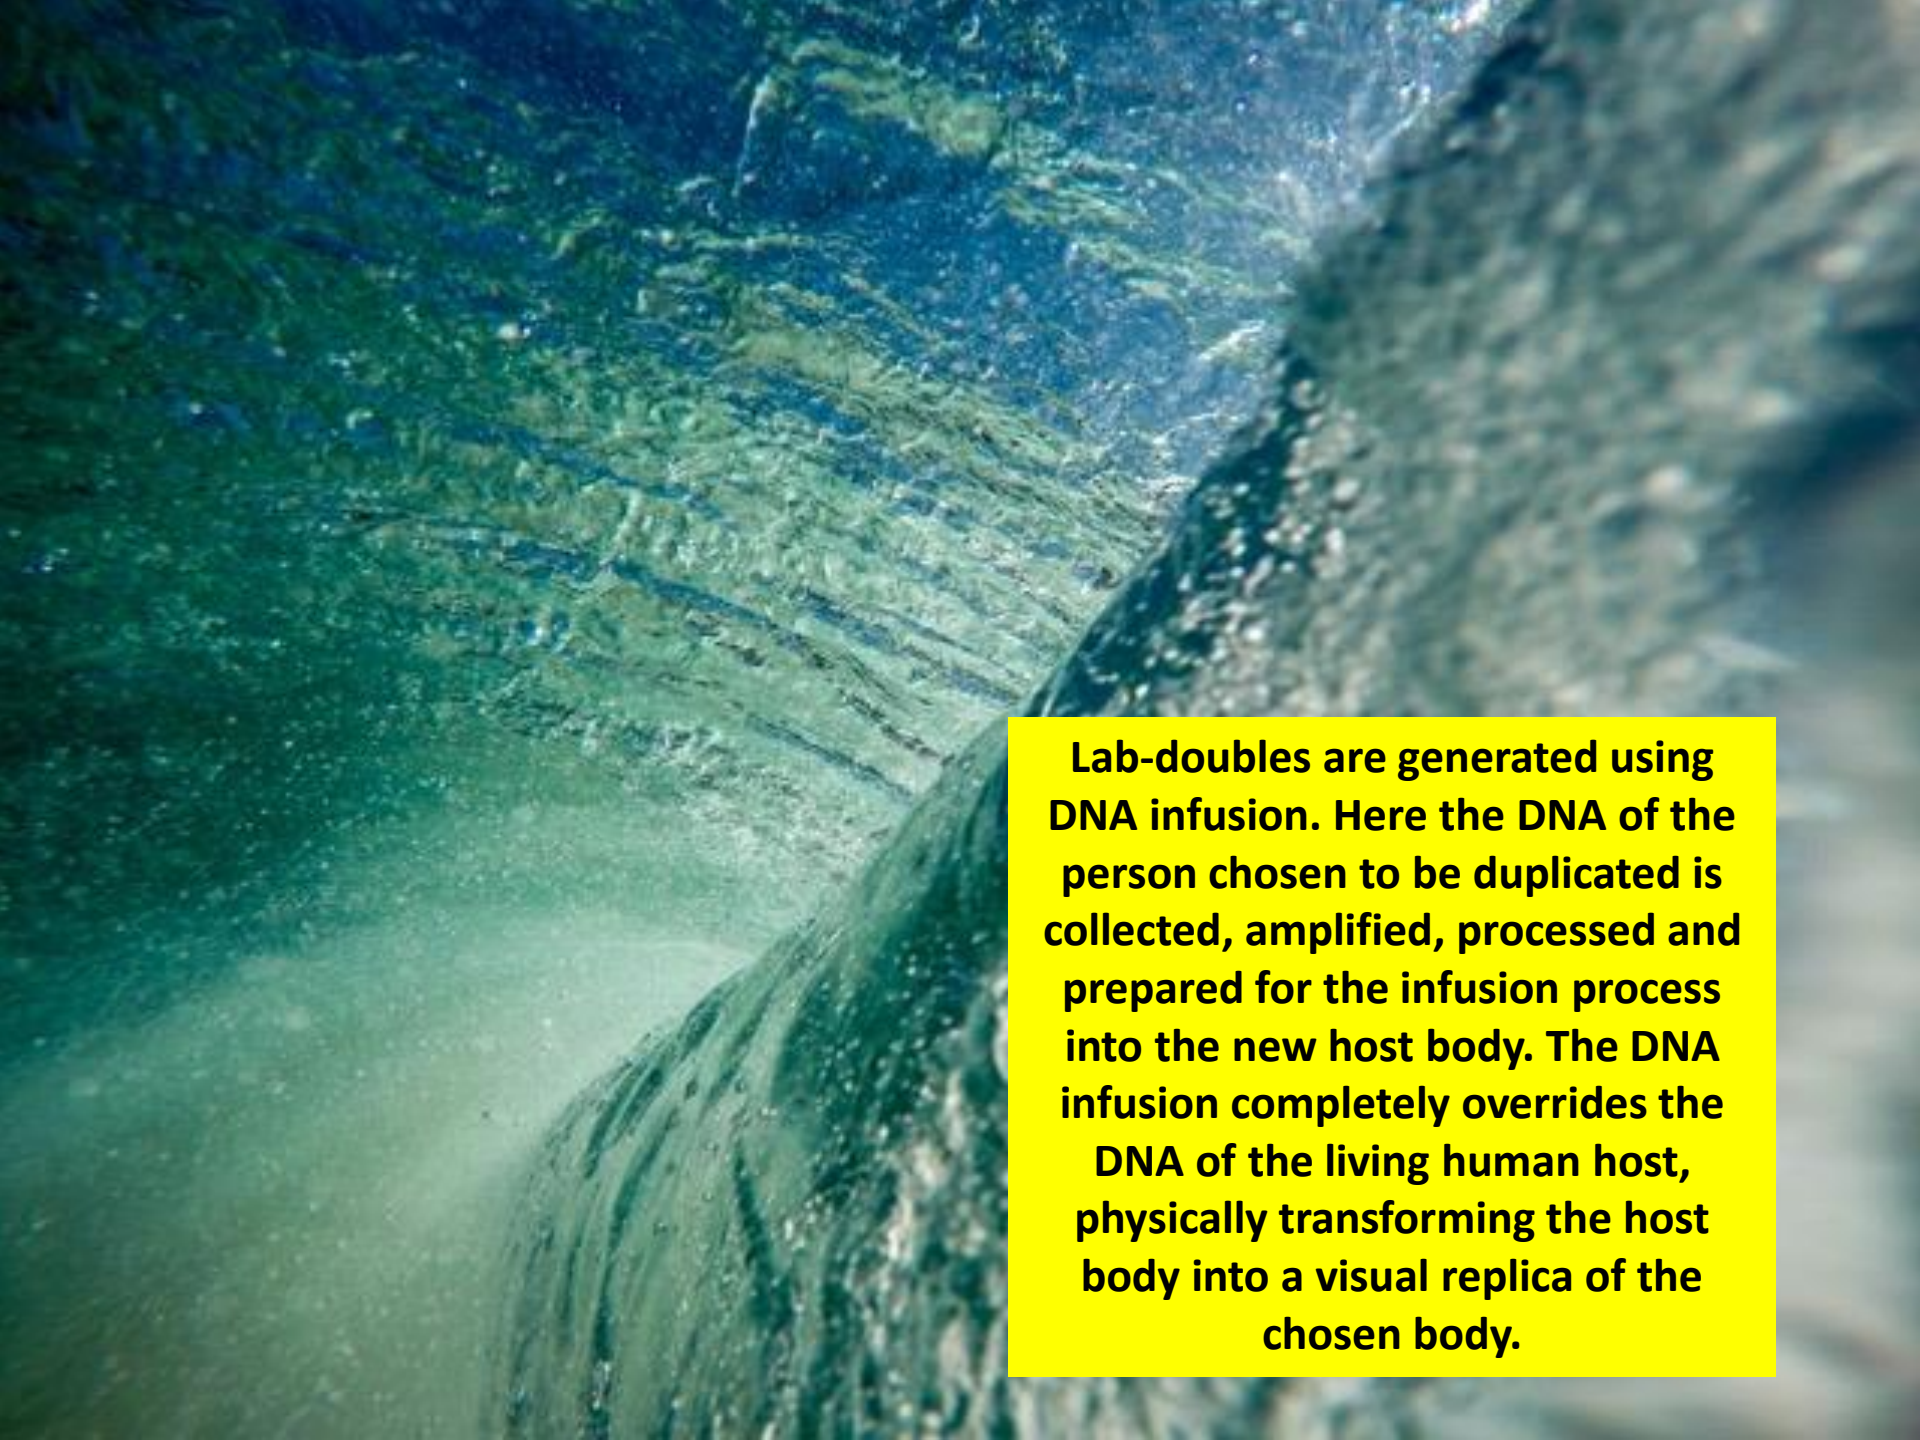

The history of this covert human cloning technology is now emerging. By the late 1970s, using monochromatic laser light technology, researchers within the Russian security community created a holographic apparatus which could record the entire memory of the living brain of a chosen human individual and store the data content of that brain on stable computer hardware. The Russians used inaudible high-frequency sound waves to create a complete three-dimensional picture of the brain.

Source: American Honda Motor Co

They discovered that their ultrasonic cerebral hologram process duplicated and stored the entire memory of the person in a coherently recoverable form. The Russians now had what they wanted to create working lab-clones for deployment. The same technique could be used to download someone else's memory into another (different) person, in this case a lab-double, and natural doubles could now be reprogrammed to take on the full memory database of the person being replaced.

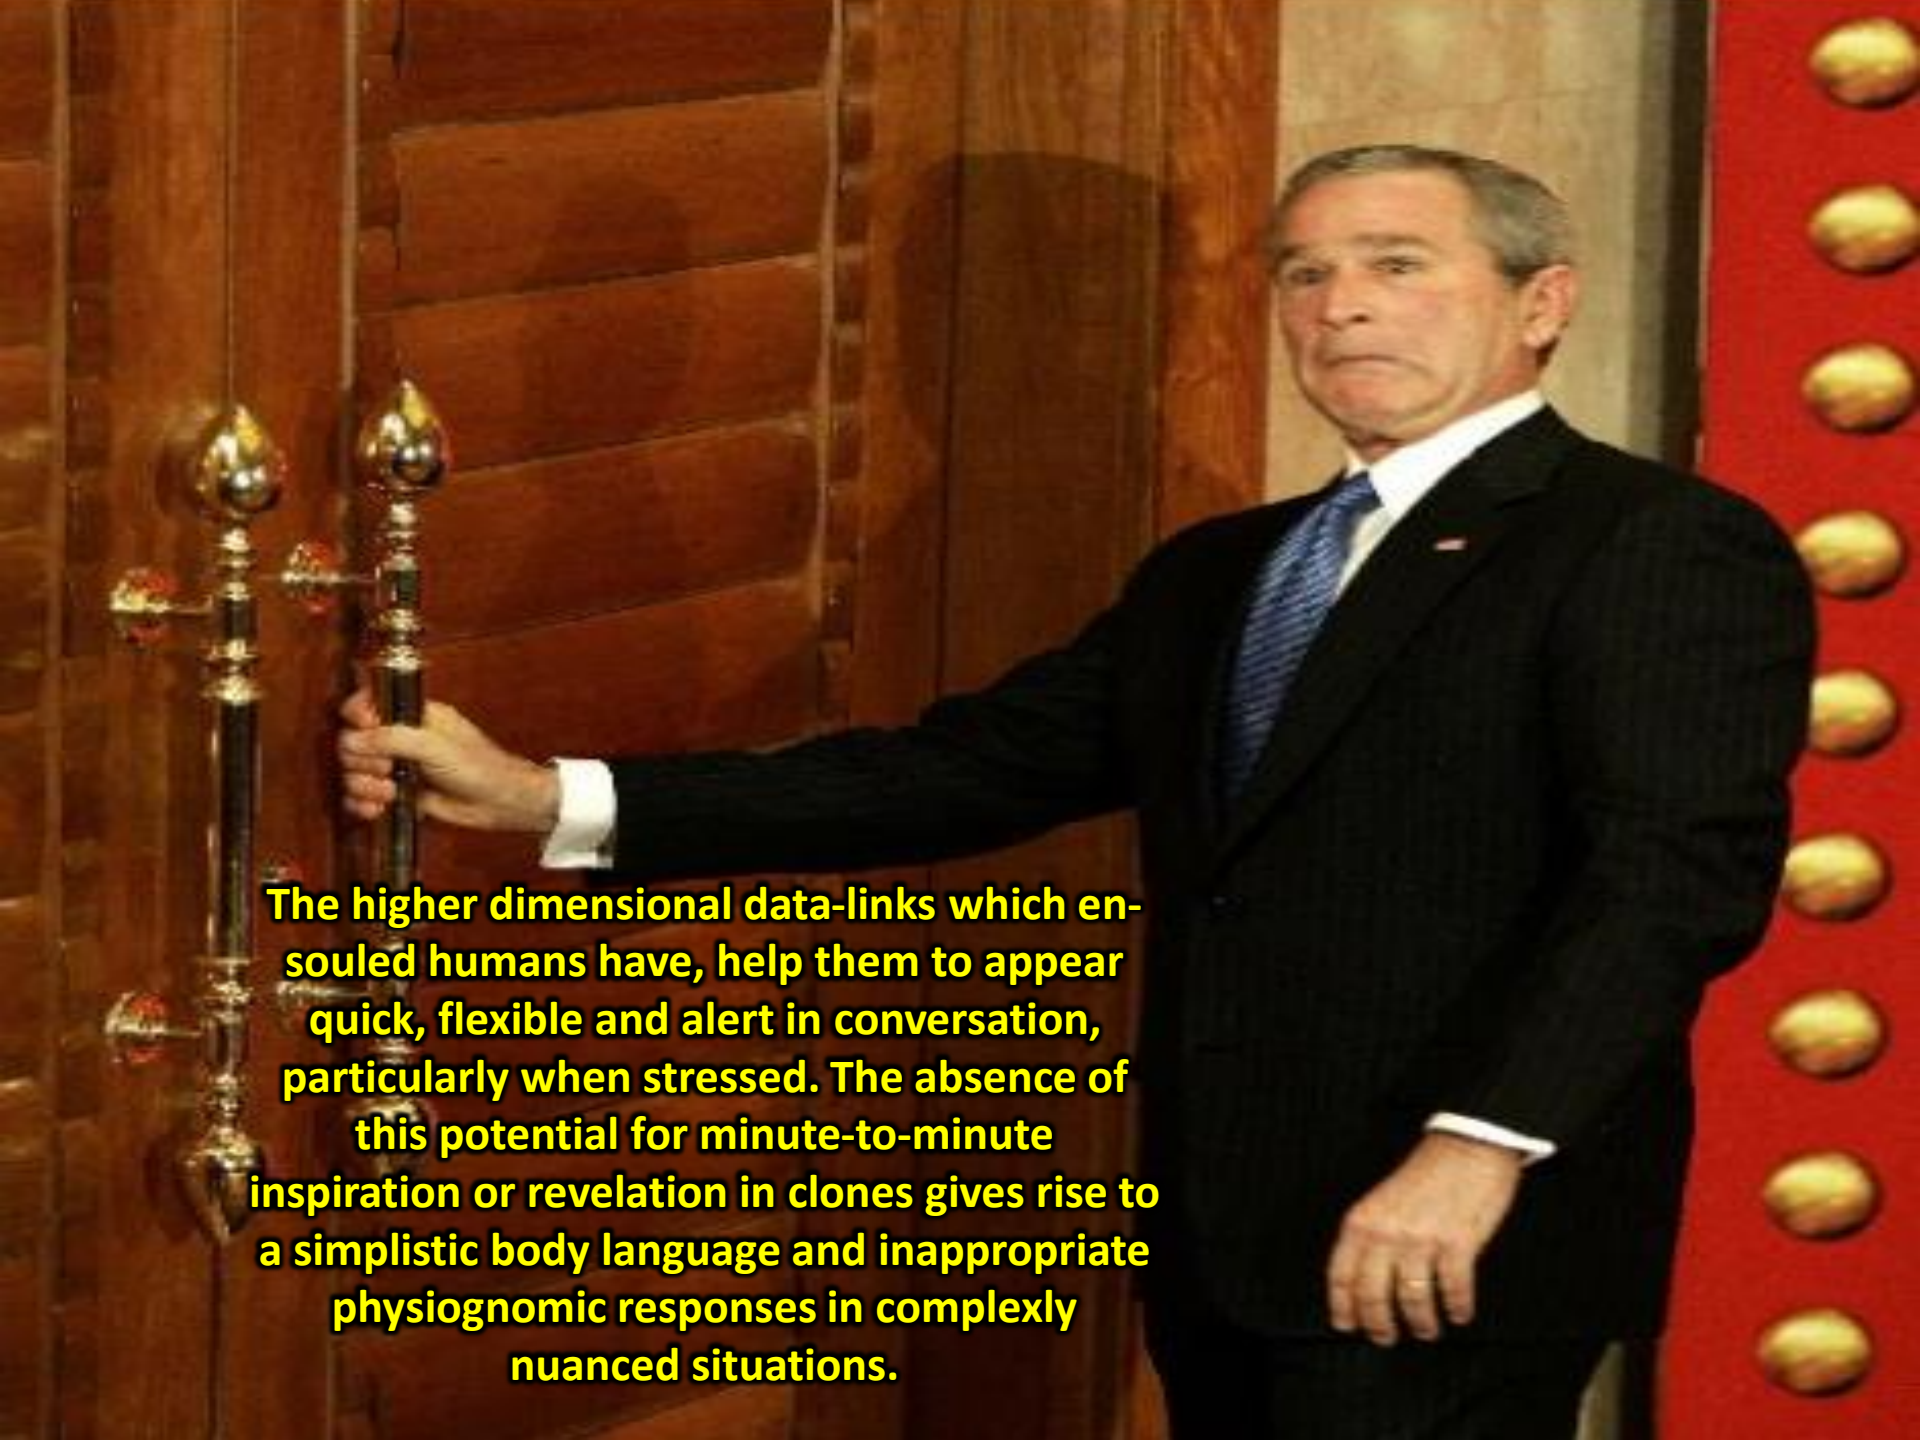

An aerial photograph of a river delta, showing a network of water channels and land. The water is a mix of blue and green, and the land is a mix of green and brown. A yellow text box is overlaid on the right side of the image.

Lab-doubles are generated using DNA infusion. Here the DNA of the person chosen to be duplicated is collected, amplified, processed and prepared for the infusion process into the new host body. The DNA infusion completely overrides the DNA of the living human host, physically transforming the host body into a visual replica of the chosen body.

However, the residual host body DNA can still be detected, and identified, within the lab-double using sensitive DNA testing procedures. Where do the human host bodies come from? Covert kidnap, abduction and fake disappearance programmes. Many of the abducted human host bodies are those of children. And, of course, any of these abducted human hosts can be subjected to brain programming manipulation as well as to complete ultrasonic cerebral downloads.

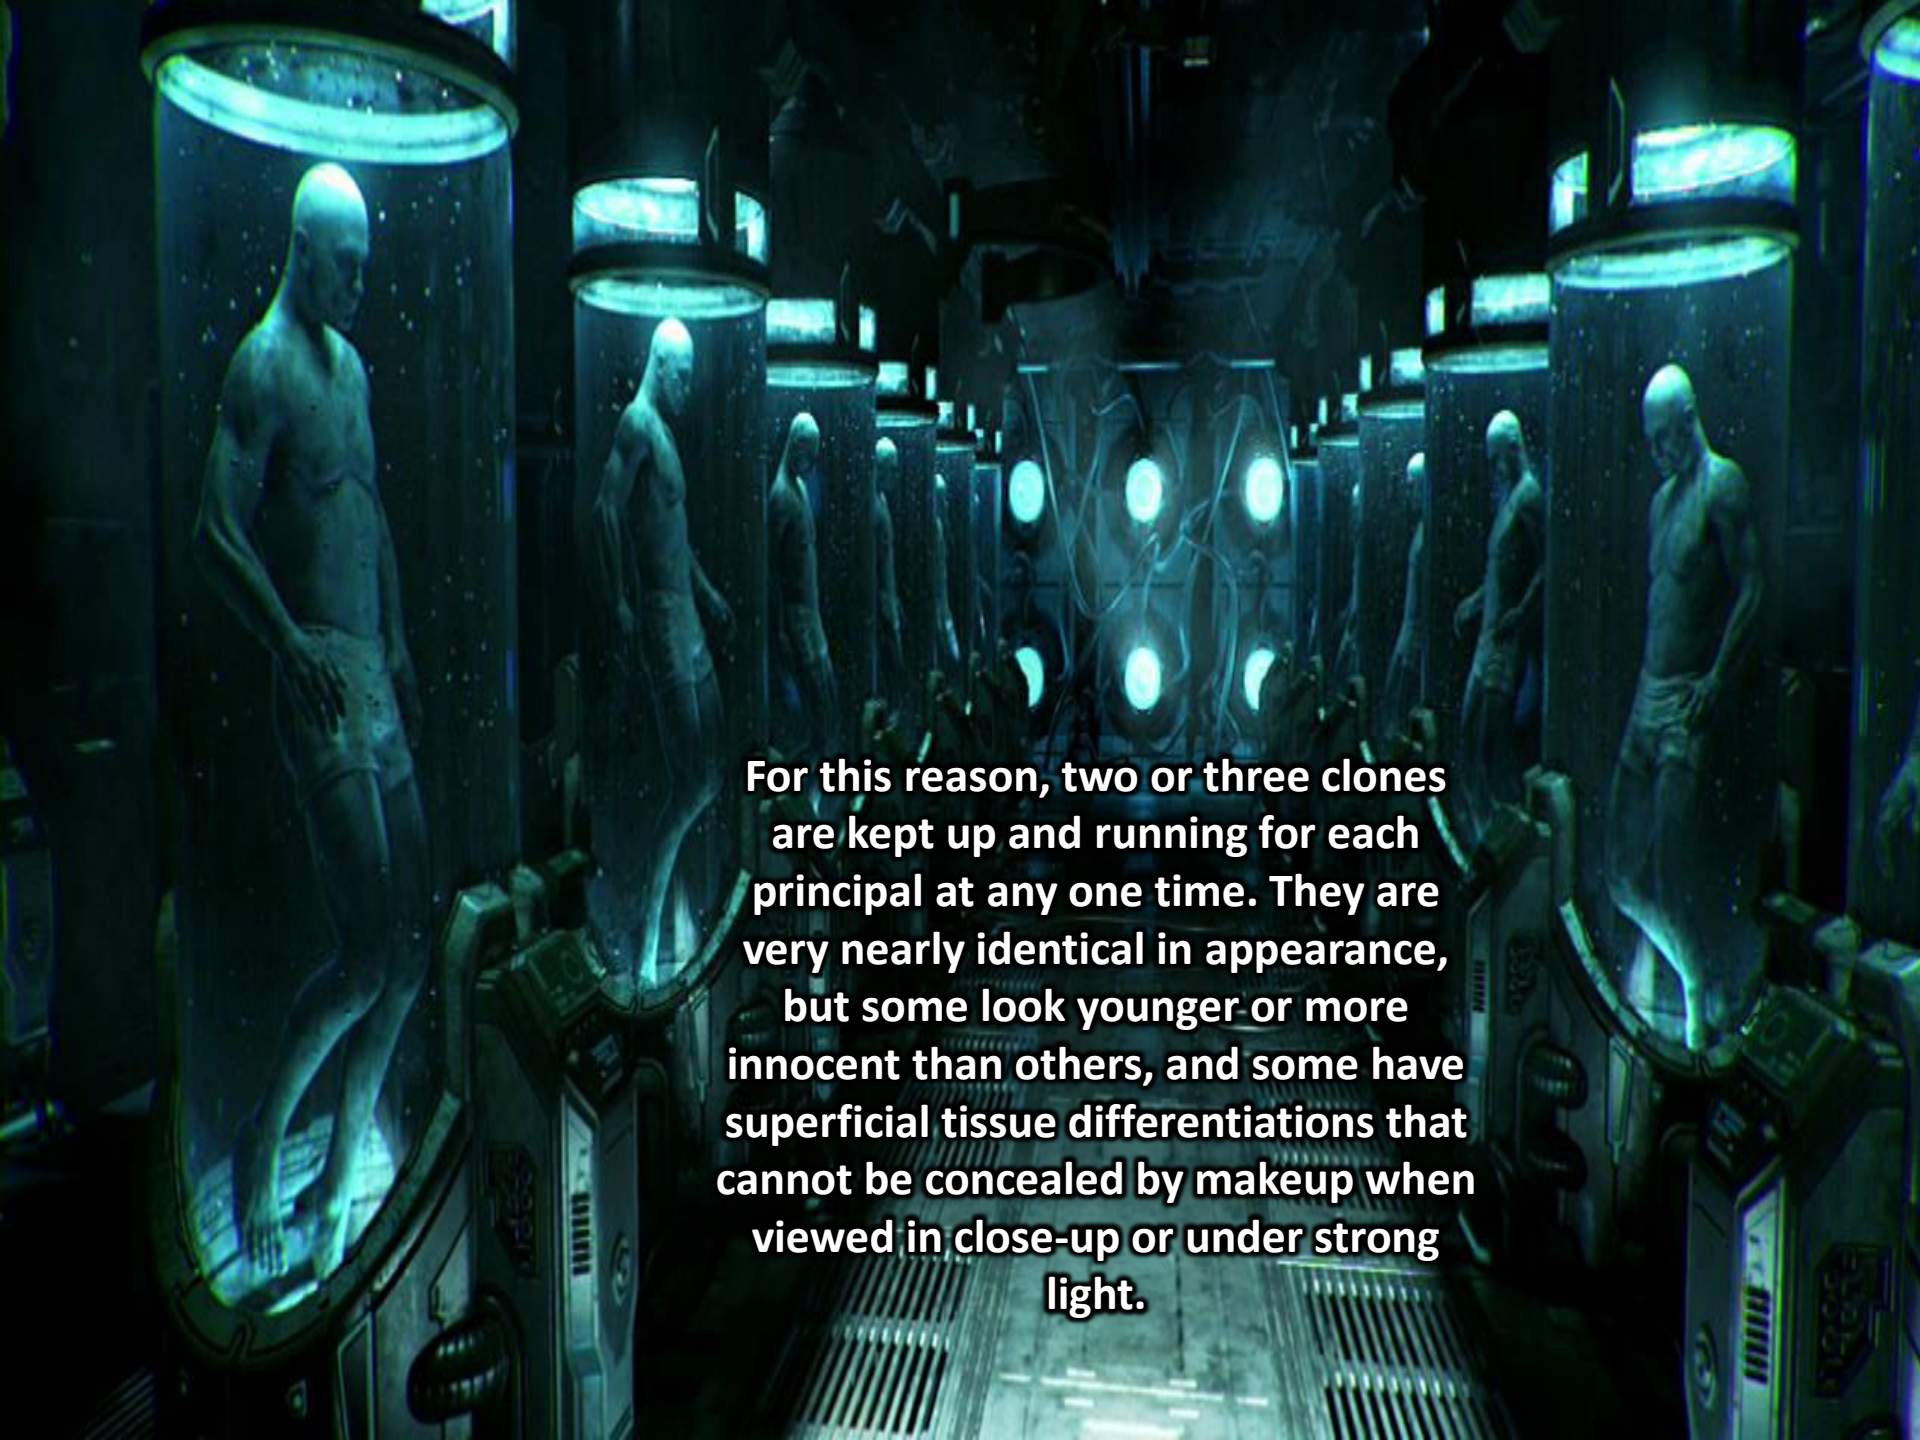

Human clones are not en-souled and do not, therefore, have access to the higher dimensions through reflection, intuition and spiritual practice. No soul means no Yah-connection. And no Yah-connection means that clones have an inherent vulnerability to religious manipulation and deceit.

The higher dimensional data-links which ensued humans have, help them to appear quick, flexible and alert in conversation, particularly when stressed. The absence of this potential for minute-to-minute inspiration or revelation in clones gives rise to a simplistic body language and inappropriate physiognomic responses in complexly nuanced situations.

It also means that when faced with metaphorated questioning or elliptical comments, they can appear slow, dim or confused. Anything that human clones are confronted with which falls outside their specific day-to-day conditioning or expectation engenders childlike conflict-signaling and tantrums.

A futuristic laboratory with multiple cloning pods containing human clones. The scene is dimly lit with a strong blue-green glow from the pods and overhead lights. The clones are standing in a line, and the overall atmosphere is cold and clinical.

For this reason, two or three clones are kept up and running for each principal at any one time. They are very nearly identical in appearance, but some look younger or more innocent than others, and some have superficial tissue differentiations that cannot be concealed by makeup when viewed in close-up or under strong light.

With regard to a clone's irrational conflict-signalling and out-of-comfort-zone tantrums, Hillary Clinton can boast considerable previous form. Ask anyone who has worked closely with her. She's not just scratchy; she can be hysterically ballistic.

The summer of 2009 provided a famous example. Hillary fractured an elbow in a furious physical fight with a senior colleague at the US State Department in Washington DC. On Wednesday 17th June 2009, the US Secretary of State lost control of herself and lashed out viciously at the US Special Representative for Afghanistan and Pakistan, Richard Holbrooke.

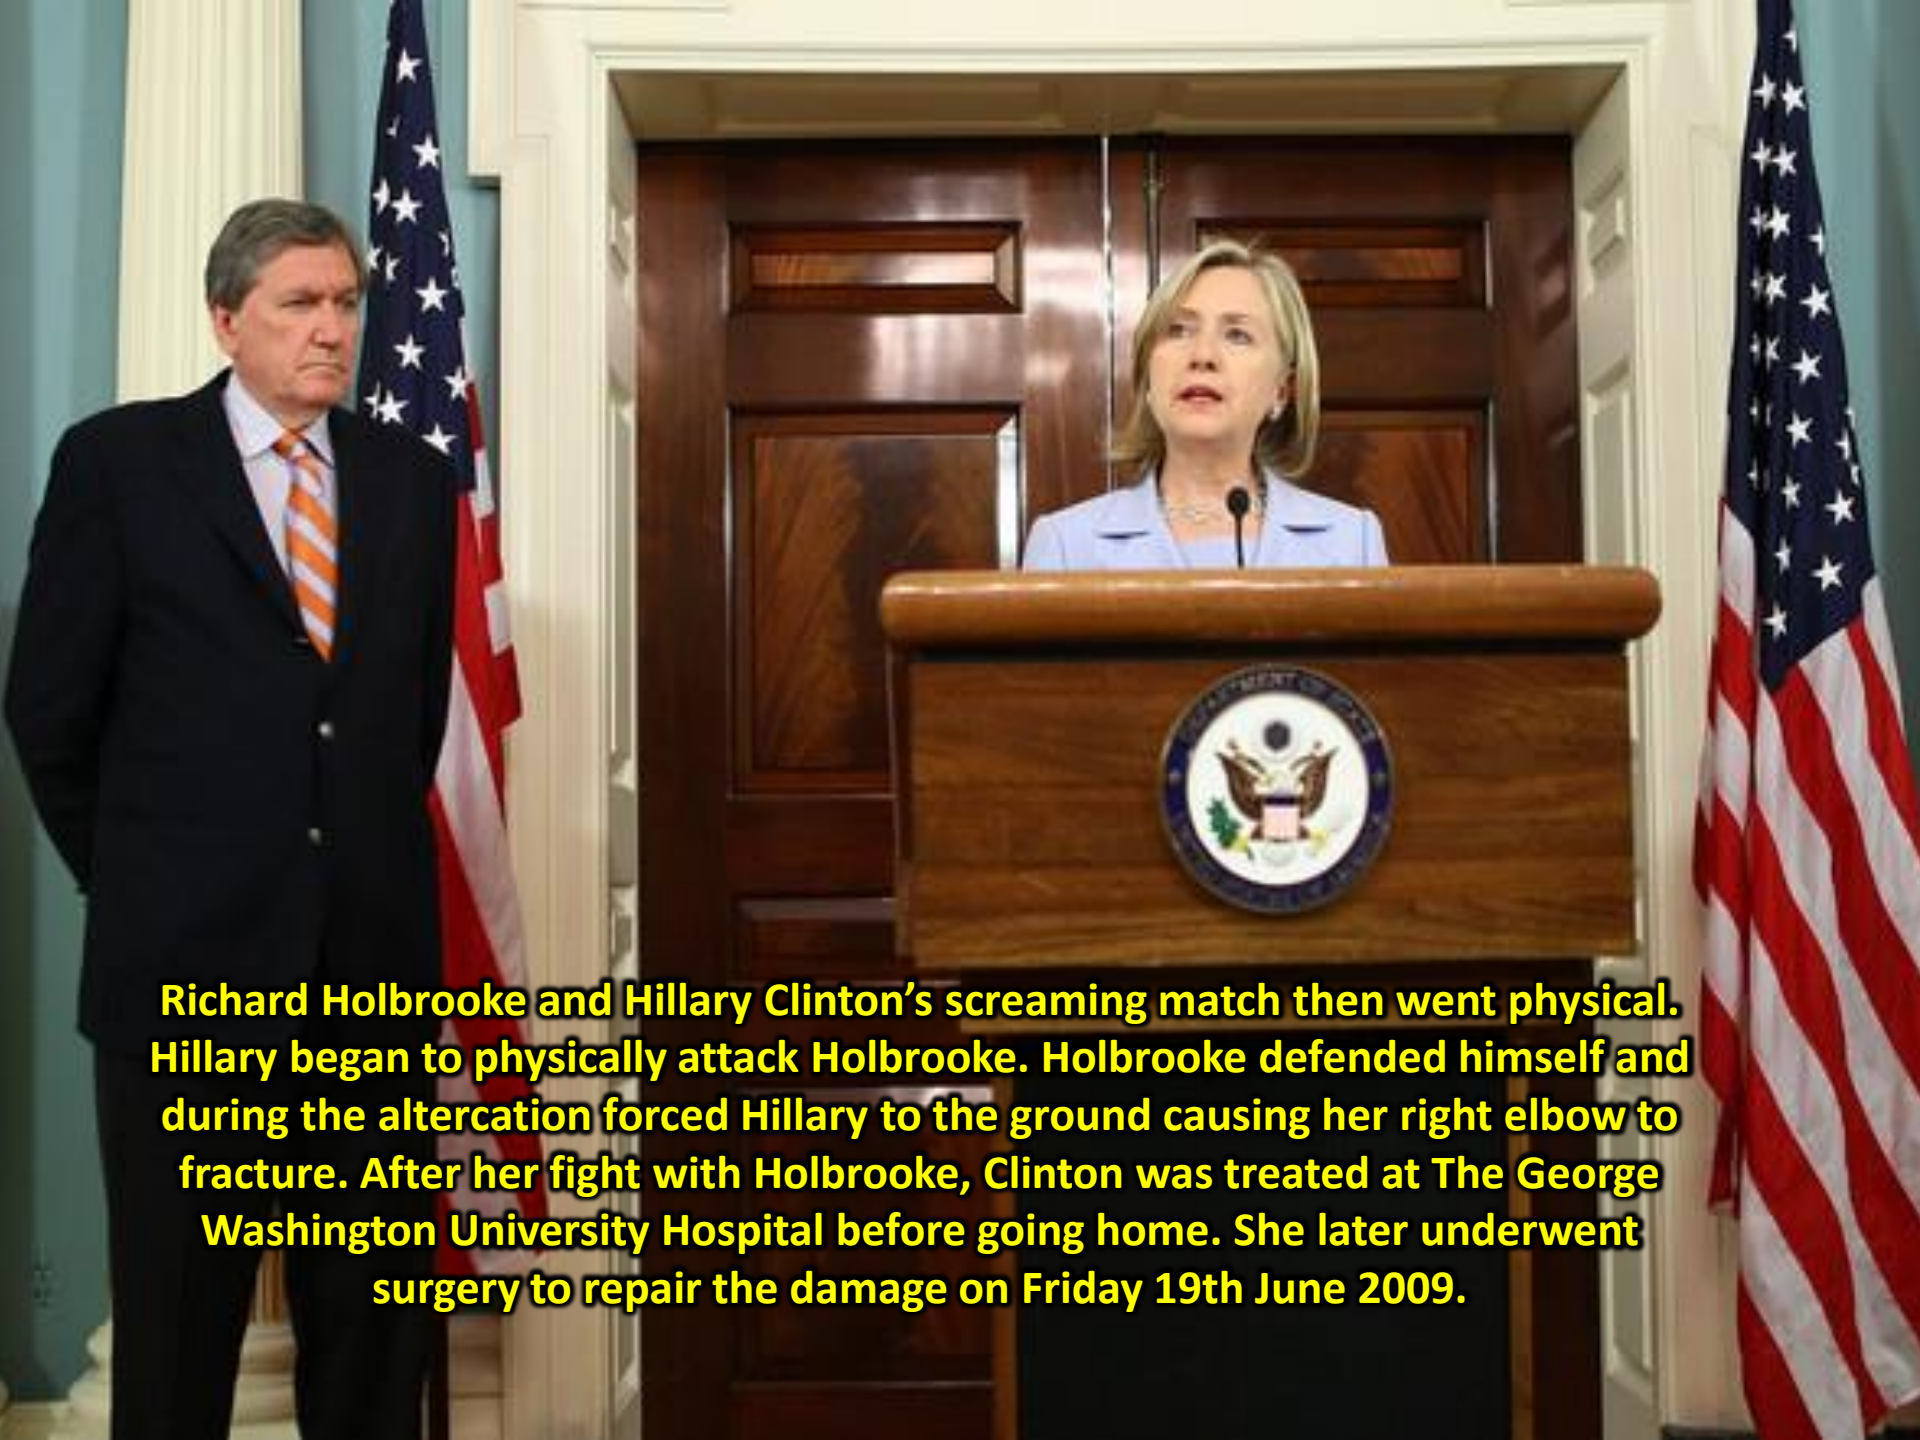

The argument and fight arose from a shouting match between the two concerning North Korea. Holbrooke had just confronted Clinton with two facts about the US's handling of the North Korea fiasco. First, he let Clinton know that he was aware that agents of the US State Department, acting for Clinton, had tipped off the North Korean government about the presence of the two Current TV journalists on the Chinese border near North Korea.

Second, Holbrooke told Clinton that he was also aware that Clinton had personally sabotaged an effort by the Swedish Ambassador, the Chinese Foreign Ministry and Albert Gore to secure a quick and safe release of the two Current TV journalists from North Korean custody. As a consequence, the journalists were unnecessarily detained in the North Korean presidential headquarters known as the Puzzle Palace.

Richard Holbrooke and Hillary Clinton's screaming match then went physical. Hillary began to physically attack Holbrooke. Holbrooke defended himself and during the altercation forced Hillary to the ground causing her right elbow to fracture. After her fight with Holbrooke, Clinton was treated at The George Washington University Hospital before going home. She later underwent surgery to repair the damage on Friday 19th June 2009.

This photograph, taken on Monday 22nd June 2009, shows Clinton's injured right arm. It is said that much of the exchange between Hillary and Holbrooke was recorded by State Department security cameras. Inside the Beltway, Richard Holbrooke suddenly became the most popular person in town.

Another celebrated Hillary Clinton tantrum occurred back in the 1990s during Bill Clinton's presidency. Investigating unusual noises at the White House one evening, a Federal Secret Service agent discovered the First Lady in a well-lubricated lesbian sexual encounter with the regular White House prostitute known as Susan.

Clinton responded by attacking the agent with a heavy glass ash tray. In fairness, it should be remarked that Susan was never exclusively lesbian in the services she provided for the US governing class. Current CIA Chief Leon Panetta and ABC talk show host George Stephanopoulos both caught genital herpes from Susan at White House socials.

Having no soul and no Yah-connection means that human clones have no spiritual processing power; they cannot function at the level of values, morals, ethics, compassion, honour or decency. Indeed, they have nothing within their intellection which energises or articulates such concepts in their consciousness. Human clones do, however, have a very powerful survival instinct.

Under sustained pressure or threat they become amoral, manipulative fighting machines without spiritual stops or conscience. What you can get away with is what you do; lying is the core modus operandi; honesty about facts on the ground is self-injurious weakness; a spectrum of alternative views on an issue is a spectrum of aggressive enemy positions; unscrupulous elimination of opponents replaces dialogue. Human clones are perfect for politics, banking, the armed forces, religion, schooling and theft. Easily mind-controlled by the hidden negative elite, clones are the visible drivers of systemic evil.

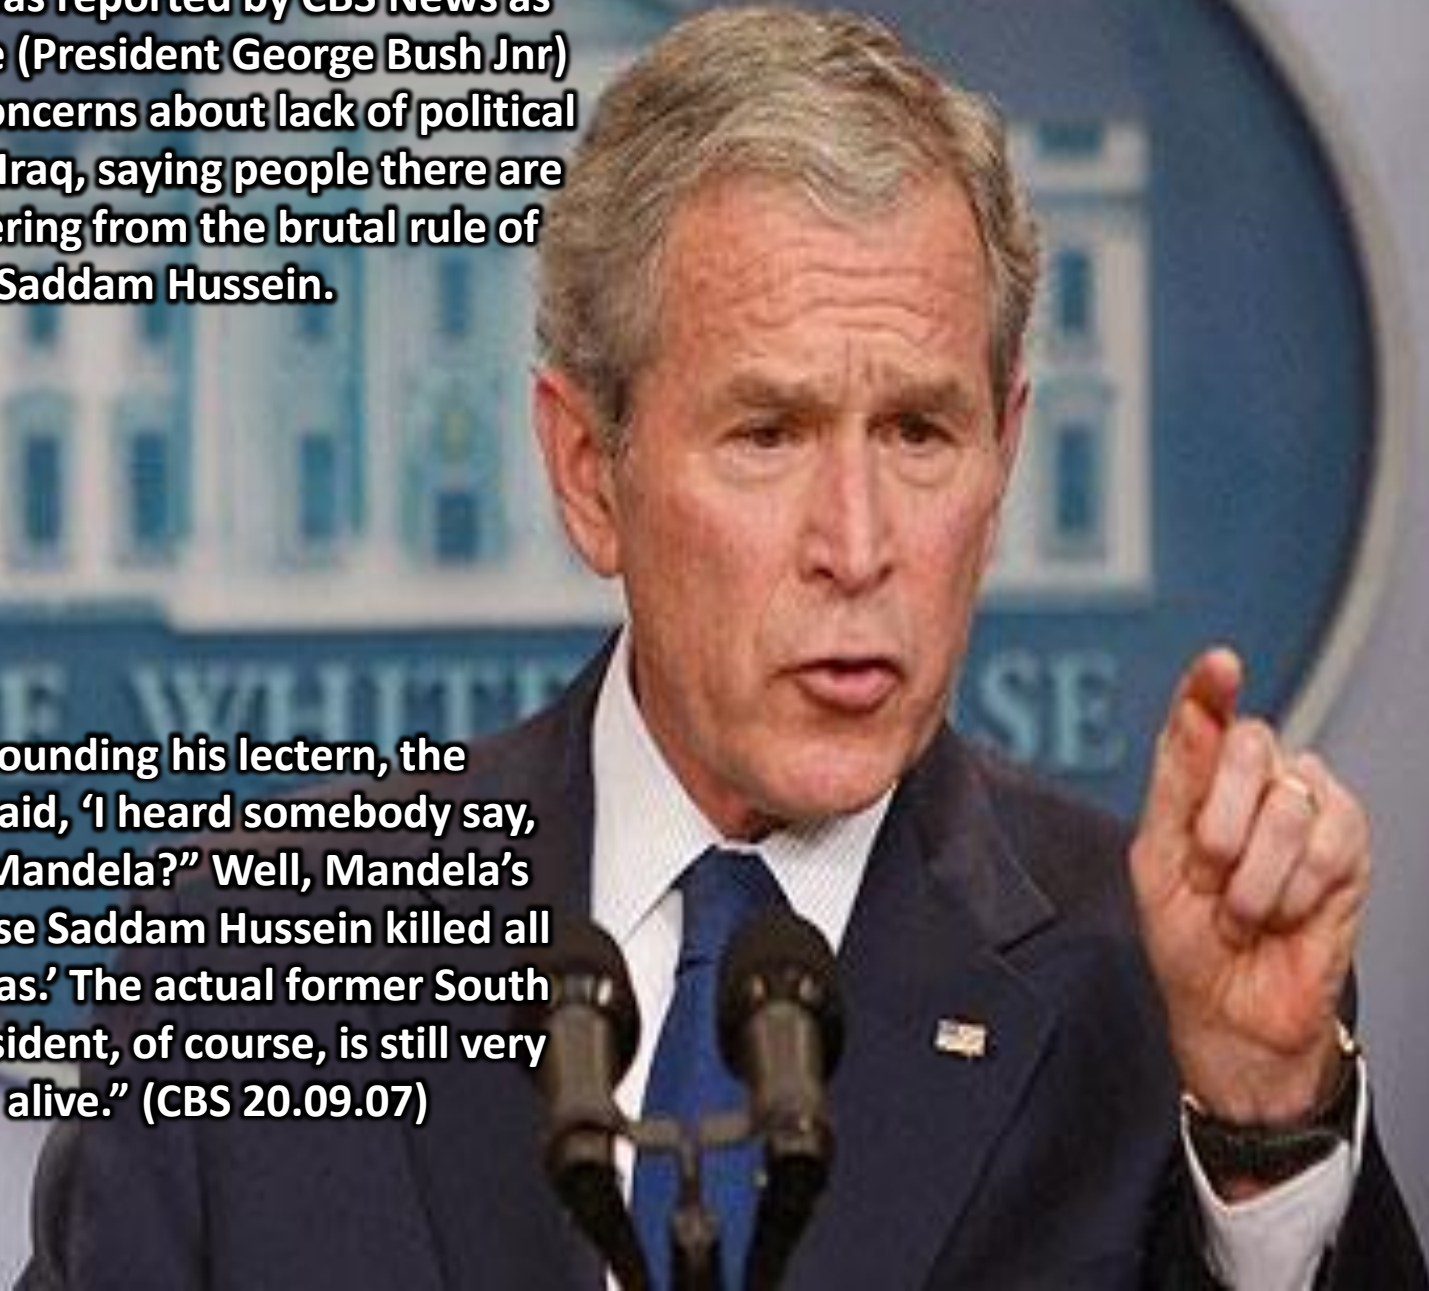

Human clones are also prone to making extraordinary bloopers when speaking in public, and not noticing their mistakes. George Bush Jnr has an extensive back catalogue of such infelicities.

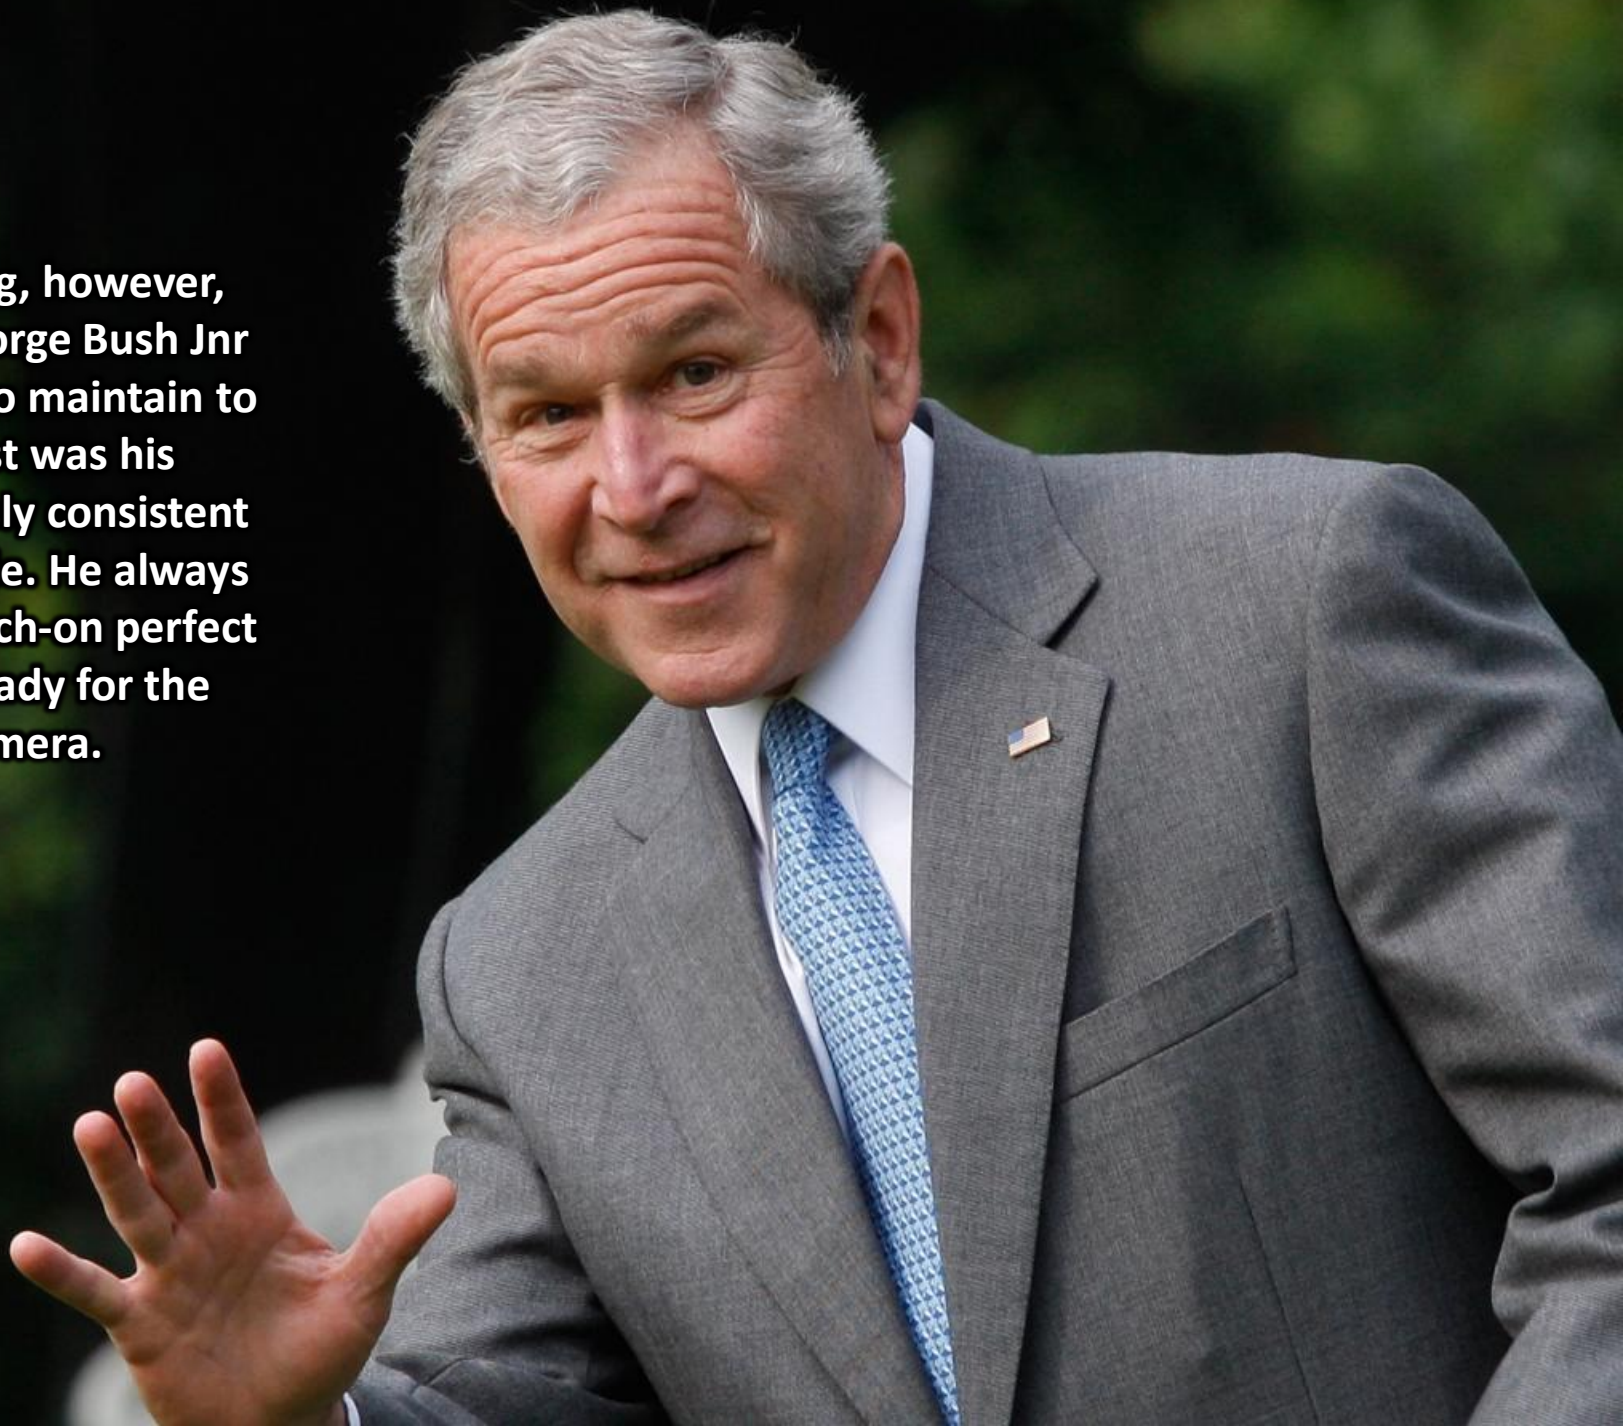

For example, speaking on Australian television in September 2007 about the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Centre in New York on the 11th September 2001, one of the Bush Jnr clones said: "And I believe those of us who live in liberty have a responsibility to promote forms of government that deal with what causes nineteen kids to get on airplanes to kill three thousand students."

Later in the same month, the same Bush Jnr clone was reported by CBS News as follows: "He (President George Bush Jnr) dismissed concerns about lack of political progress in Iraq, saying people there are still recovering from the brutal rule of Saddam Hussein."

Then, pounding his lectern, the president said, 'I heard somebody say, "Where's Mandela?" Well, Mandela's dead because Saddam Hussein killed all the Mandelas.' The actual former South African president, of course, is still very much alive." (CBS 20.09.07)

which George Bush Jr was able to maintain to the last was his suspiciously consistent clone-smile. He always had a switch-on perfect smile ready for the

Switch-on perfect, switch-on perfect, switch-on perfect; it never changed. Ensouled human beings – even experienced actors – cannot do this; their smiles are always moderated by the ‘spiritual’ circumstances and context of the camera-call.

Their physiognomies betray a slight change of texture, a strained tension, a fuller or slightly less full beam. And the eyes often say something the smile does not. They still smile well, but they smile differently each time. This is not the case with clones. Clones are robotically identical each smile.

US President Barack Obama furnishes a good example. On Wednesday 23rd September 2009, Obama hosted a reception at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. During this event, he stood for 135 separate photographs with visiting foreign dignitaries who were in town for a major UN meeting.

As this rapid-fire slideshow from Eric Spiegelman demonstrates, the US President had exactly the same smile in every shot. Spiegelman put his compilation on Vimeo shortly after the Met event and gave it the title: “Barack Obama’s amazingly consistent smile.”

Ada, Oklahoma's underground facility is being used to clone humans. The other cloning facilities are turning out weird creatures. Due to the processes involved they give off lots of gamma radiation (Gamma is at the far end of the electromagnetic wave spectrum--it is even a longer wave than ultraviolet). Because they give off Gamma radiation, these facilities must be deep underground. The cloning is done at level 7. The average depth (according to one of the men who built these Deep Underground Facilities - D.U.M.) is 5,600'.

The secret cloning facility at Bull Run near Mt. Hood, OR is a large tract of forested land with some water reservoirs/lakes that is set up to help provide water for the Portland Metro area. My house on Lincoln St. was also near 8 reservoirs that were built at nearby Mt. Tabor. These reservoirs at Mt. Tabor were for Portland drinking water too. The Mt. Tabor reservoirs have simple single fences on their perimeter, and people are able to throw garbage into these reservoirs if they want to be nasty. However, the Bull Run water supply which is very isolated is extremely well protected. It is rare that people would stray up into the area anyway. People are told that this large tract of land is simply for Portland's water supply, and yet several years ago a Patriot military unit reconned the area after getting info from me. They were able to identify 3 strongly guarded rings of defense at the Bull Run reservoir. The area has lots of electronic surveillance, etc. It is either the most valuable water on YAH's green earth, or there is something else in the vicinity of Larch Mountain (south of the famous Multnomah Falls which sit on I-84)--something besides a water reservoir. Of course, those in the know, know that it's an underground facility which the CIA use. It's not an accident Tektronics here in the Portland area does work/research with holograms.

Interview with Karla Turner

TAKEN

When Ted was a teenager, he and a number of other teenagers were abducted together and shown copies of their bodies. In this instance, too, the clones were used as threats."

Abduction Agenda

Foreword by Linda Moulton Howe

“That’s not the sun, is it?” he wondered.
But before he could go further, he felt himself rising from the ground, unable to move floating up toward the source of the strange light.

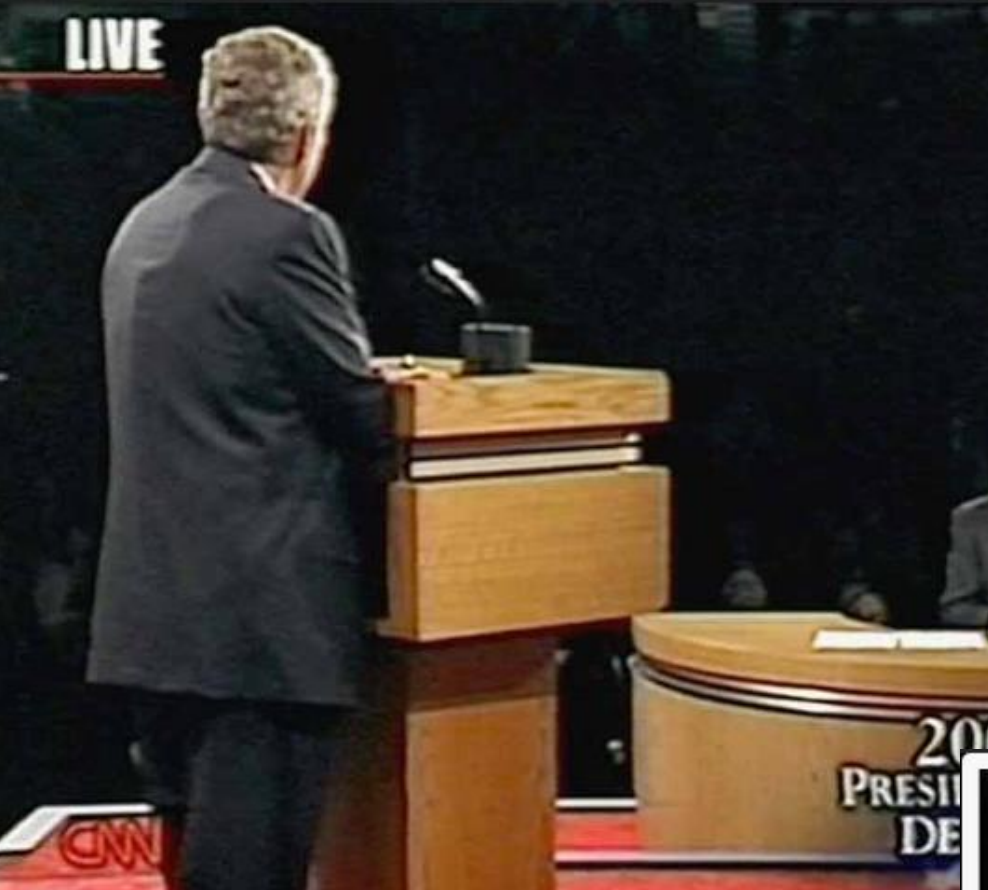

"Ted recalled a process whereby his original body was killed. They first gave him a glowing, green, fiery substance to drink. It made him extremely nauseated. He vomited it immediately, and then they cut off his head [and his vital fluid was drained from his body into a container]. When his soul energy -- or whatever you want to call it -- came up out of his body, it remained attached to the body at this lumpy, glowing, green liquid area. It appeared to be unable to get free of that. They sucked it into a little black box, which was set on a counter while the aliens readied his new cloned body. Then they put probes into the shoulders, neck and feet of the new body to activate it. Once it began to breathe, the soul energy could be put into it. His soul energy, which had been stored in the little black box ever since they killed his first body, was introduced into the new body, and because the body was breathing, it was trapped there."

Dr. Karla Turner died of cancer on January 10, 1996, after being threatened for her work. She was just 48. Since then, several other people involved in UFO investigation have also experienced threats followed by highly unusual cancers. Several of her case studies are now dead.

It's not "aliens." It's MK-ULTRA.

But what about Hillary Clinton? Is she really a tribal subset of mind-controlled clones? Follow the DNA. It's there in the lavatories, handkerchiefs, discarded nasal tissues, cosmetics applicators, bedroom dust, cutlery, drinking glasses and coffee cups. And look out for the little black box under the clothes. It's smaller than it used to be in the famous George Bush Jnr photographs

A) Average of 12 video frames. Individual frames from a TV screen were imaged with a digital camera, converted to 16-bit TIF and averaged to increase the signal-to-noise. The image shows a strange T-shaped "box" between Bush's shoulders.

B) Image from "A" unsharpened masked in photoshop, radius =15, amount =100%. This is a standard photo sharpening method in digital photography and enhances the appearance of edges. The box is more apparent as is a possible wire running up his right shoulder.

The background of the slide is a complex, abstract pattern of thin, white, glowing lines. These lines radiate from a central point, creating a sense of depth and movement. The lines are most concentrated in the center and become sparser towards the edges. The overall effect is reminiscent of a neural network or a complex data visualization. The text is overlaid on this background in a bright yellow color.

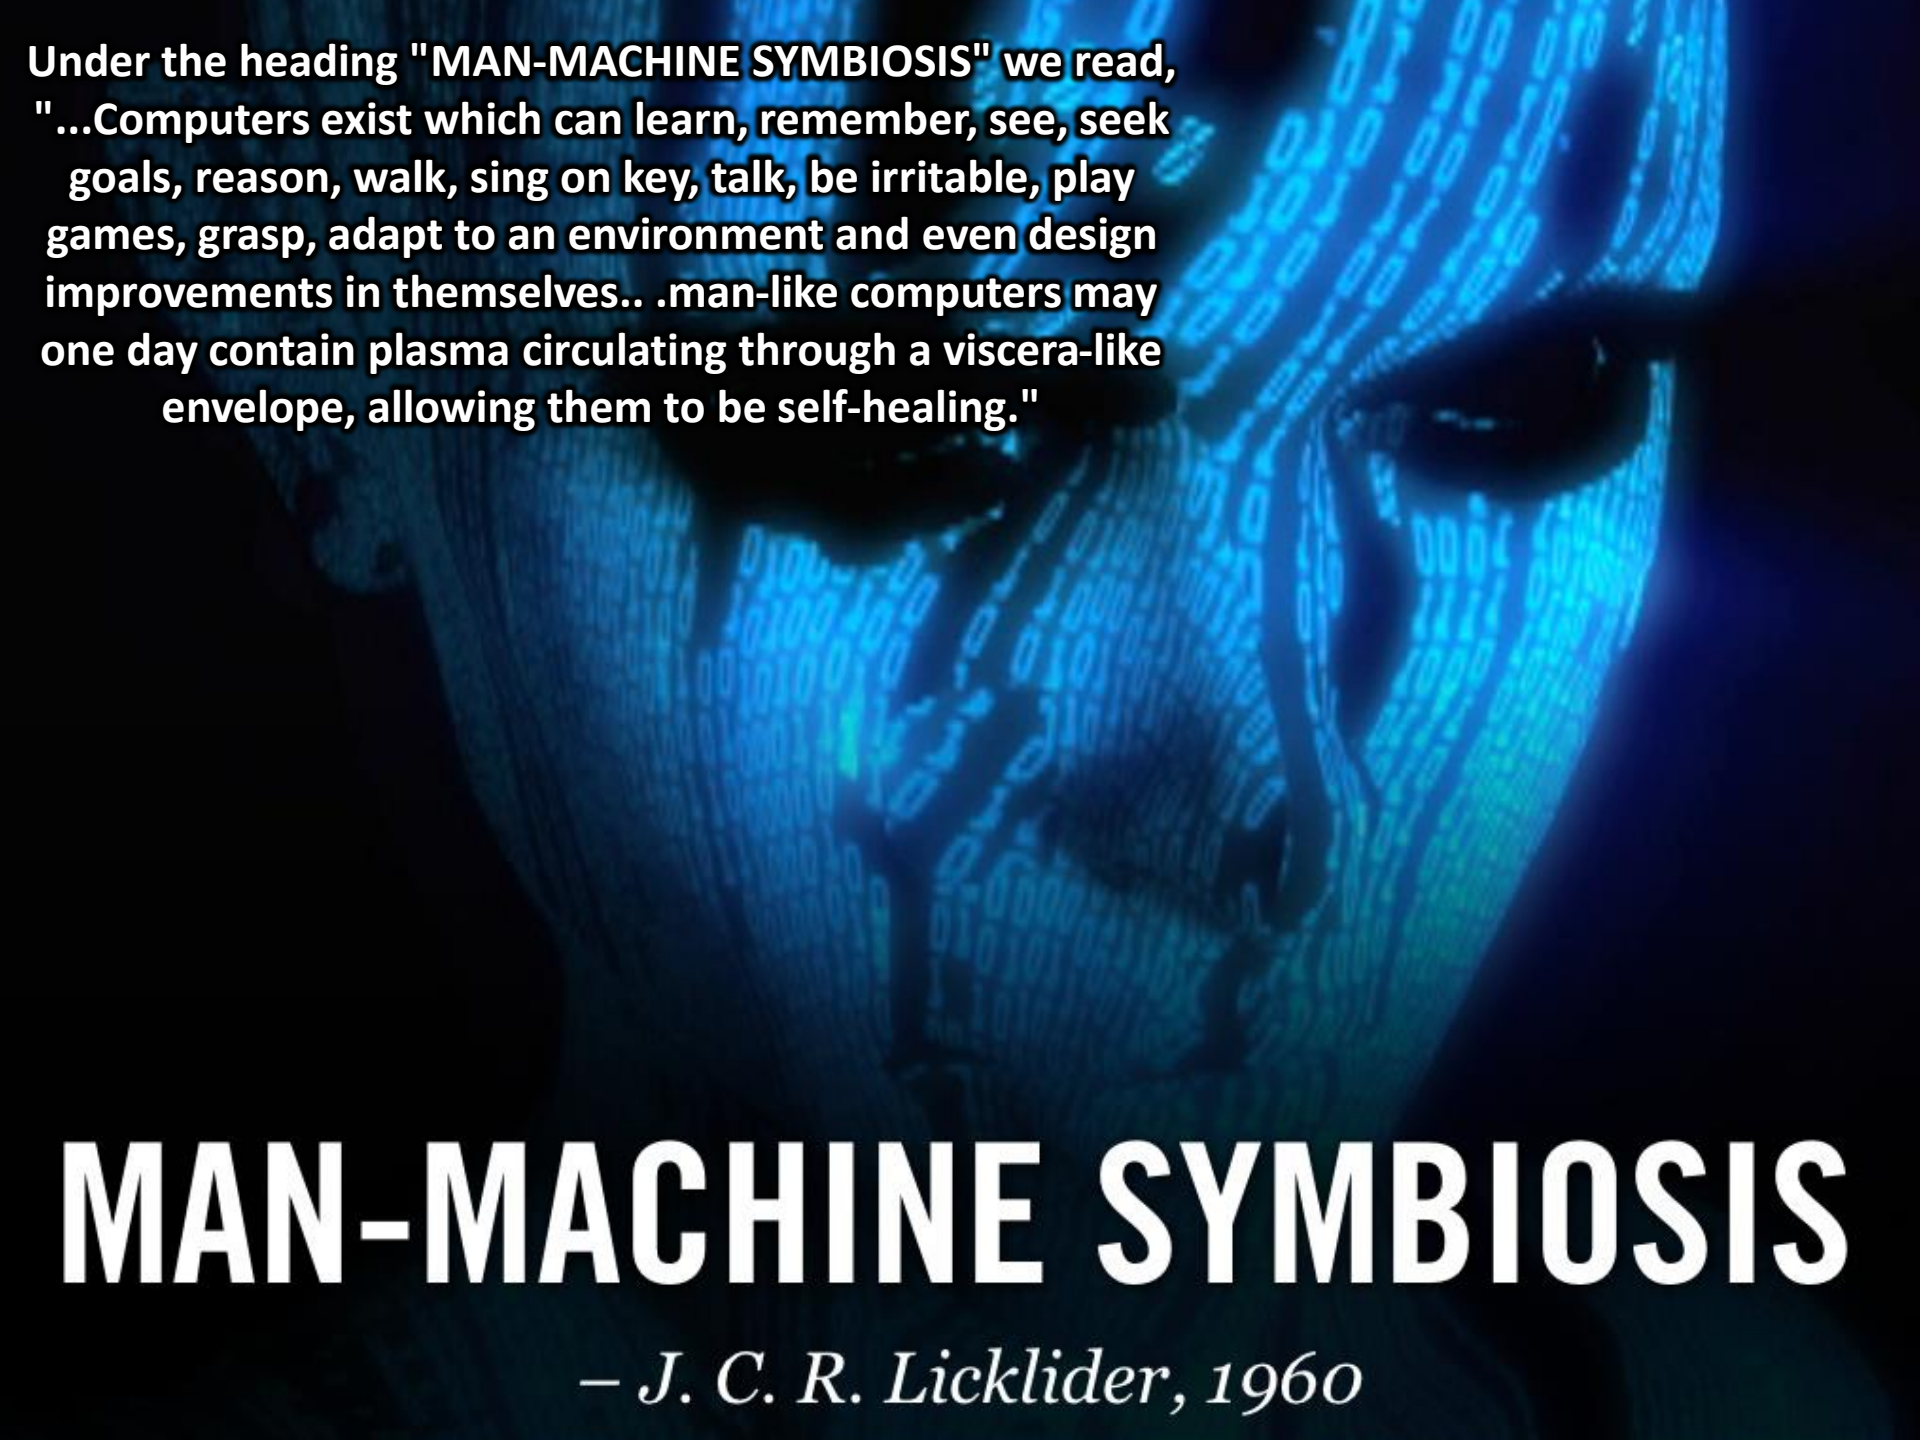

Cl. Actual Clones. This is a person who has been grown from a test tube (called "in vitro") or implanted womb, which has the identical genetic makeup to another person--an identical twin so to speak in terms of genetic makeup. The genetic coding has reproduced, and a new person who is an identical twin is now in existence.

Under the title heading "GENETIC MANIPULATION" we read, "The ability to control the formation of new beings may be one of the most basic developments of the future. Recent discoveries about the nucleonic acids, the basic building blocks of life, have led to the belief that man may some day be able to treat genes in such a way that desired characteristics can be realized..."

C2. Synthetic People. These are "persons" who look every bit as real as a real person, but simulate human beings. Certain tissues extracted from cattle are the starting point. (This is part of the reason for cattle mutilations.) The process is an advancement of a process discovered in the late 1950's. This 1959 experiment was reported in a book in 1968 called The Biological Time Bomb by Gordon Retray Taylor. Taylor describes the experiment done in France, "They had extracted DNA from the cells of the khaki Cam phells and had injected it into the white Pekins, thinking that just possibly the offspring of the latter might show some character derived from khaki Campbells. To their astonishment the actual ducks they injected began to change. Their white feathers darkened, and their necks began to take on the peculiar curve which is a mark of the khaki Campbell." The scientists working under the auspices of the Rothschilds, (who are directed by Satan himself) developed this process by working at secret breakneck speed. They developed an advanced development of the process they discovered with the DNA chicken experiment. By the late 1970's, synthetic people could be produced by the Illuminati.

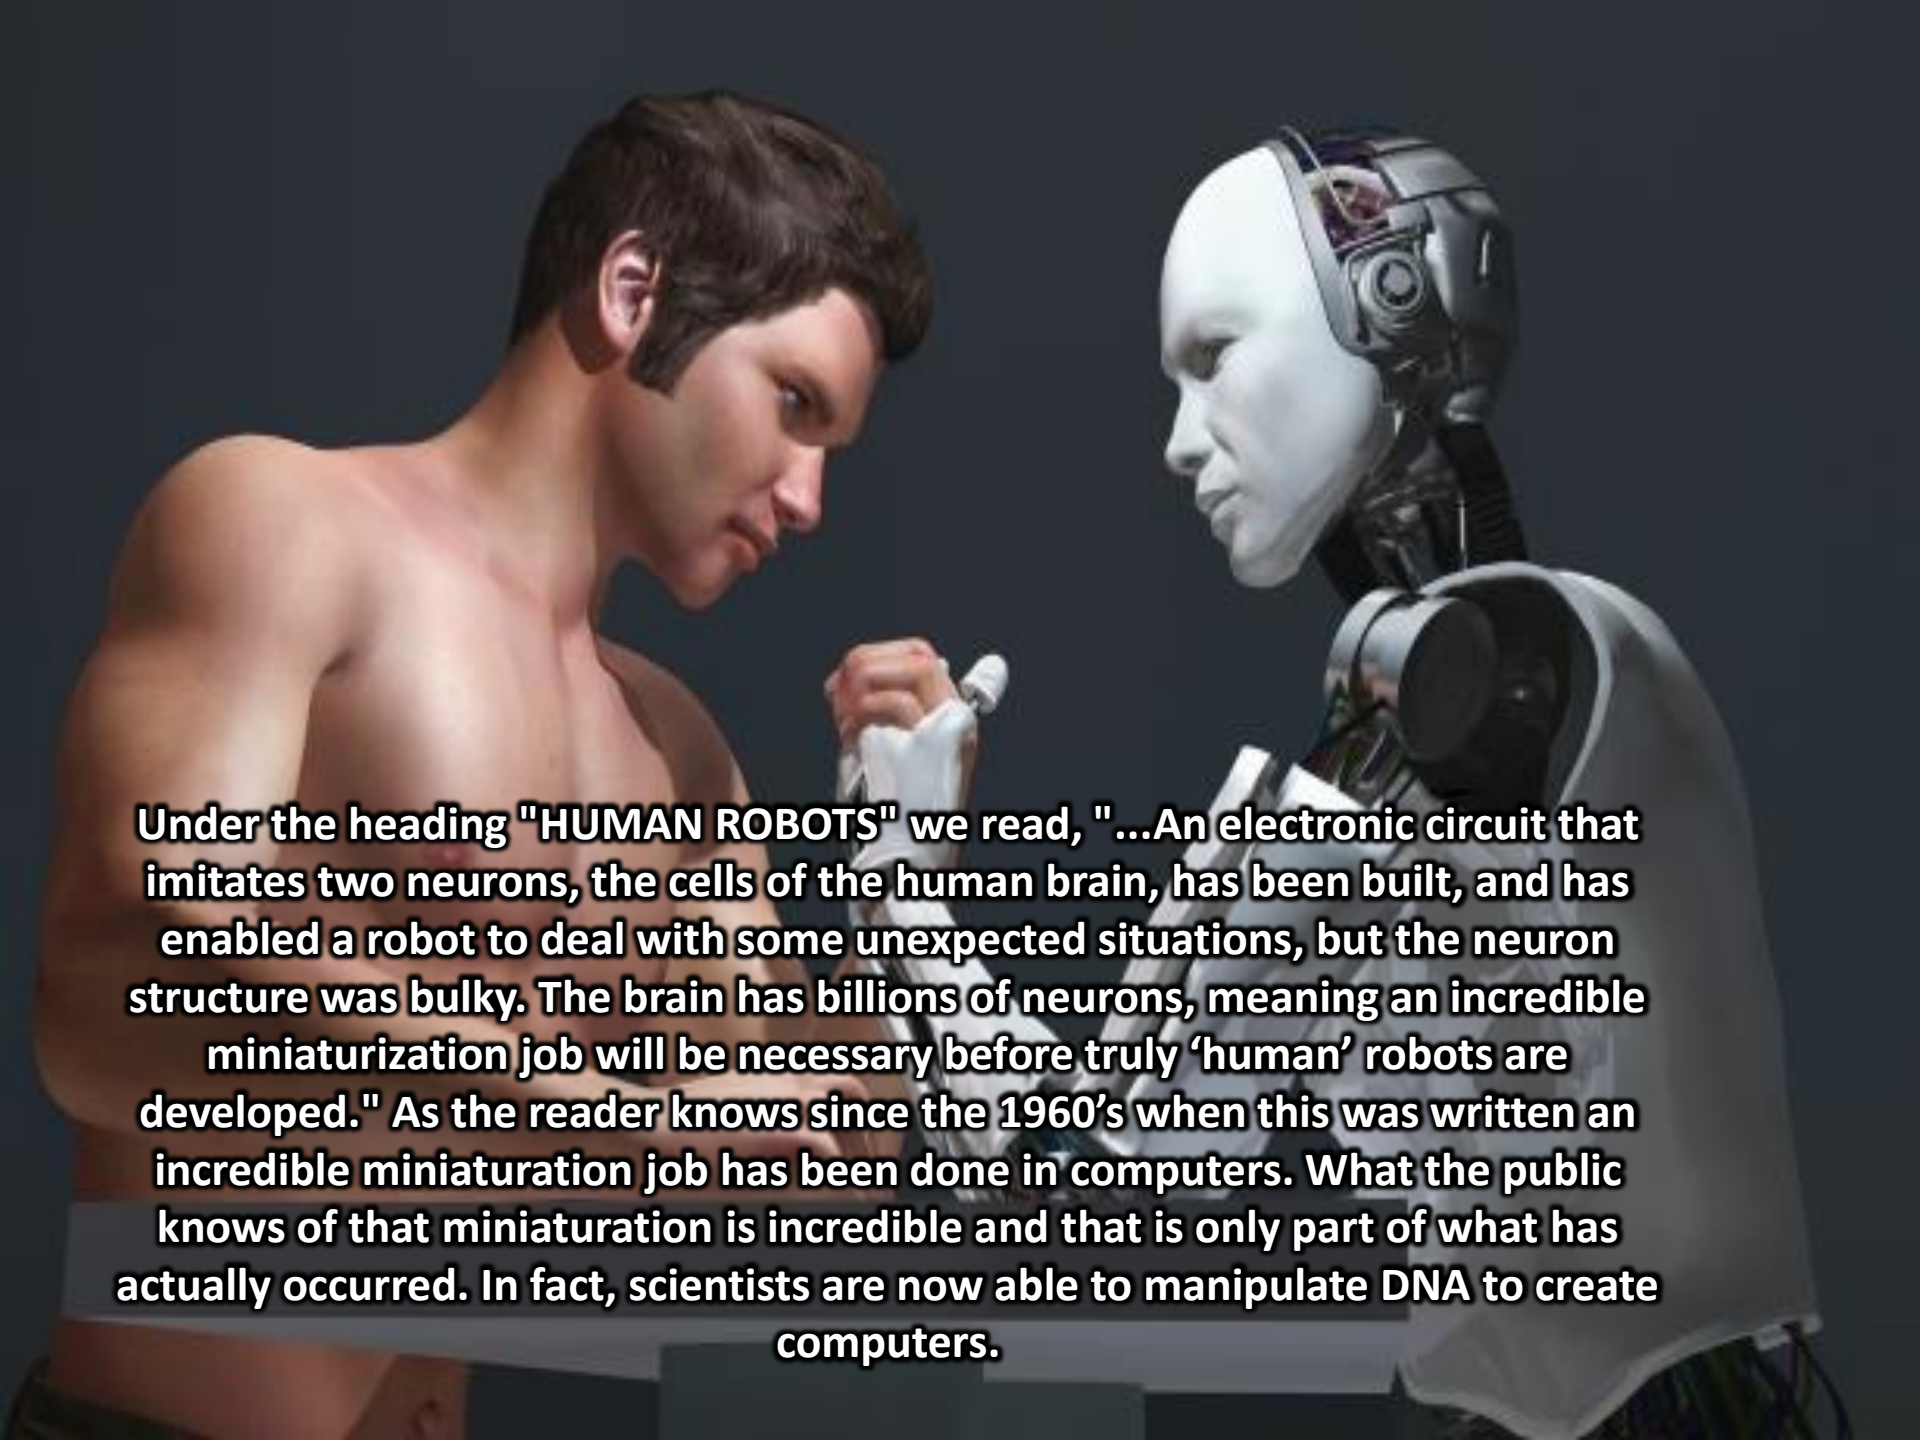

Under the heading "MAN-MACHINE SYMBIOSIS" we read, "...Computers exist which can learn, remember, see, seek goals, reason, walk, sing on key, talk, be irritable, play games, grasp, adapt to an environment and even design improvements in themselves.. .man-like computers may one day contain plasma circulating through a viscera-like envelope, allowing them to be self-healing."

MAN-MACHINE SYMBIOSIS

– J. C. R. Licklider, 1960

C3. Organic Robotoids. This is an "artificial life" form that is created through processes that are totally different than cloning or synthetics. Organic robotoid technology is being made to make exact as possible copies of important people such as Presidents and some of their staff.

A photograph showing a shirtless man on the left and a white humanoid robot on the right. They are both looking intently at a small, white, cylindrical object held by the man. The background is dark and out of focus.

Under the heading "HUMAN ROBOTS" we read, "...An electronic circuit that imitates two neurons, the cells of the human brain, has been built, and has enabled a robot to deal with some unexpected situations, but the neuron structure was bulky. The brain has billions of neurons, meaning an incredible miniaturization job will be necessary before truly 'human' robots are developed." As the reader knows since the 1960's when this was written an incredible miniaturization job has been done in computers. What the public knows of that miniaturization is incredible and that is only part of what has actually occurred. In fact, scientists are now able to manipulate DNA to create computers.

01/why-human-cloning-is-so-frightening/](http://www.markmiravalle.com/uncategorized/01/why-human-cloning-is-so-frightening/)

Only Yah can create and only Yah can infuse a human soul, with the powers of universal knowledge and authentic free will, as well as a true human conscience. Is Yah obliged to infuse a human soul into a man-made human body? I believe the answer might well be, "No."

No, Yah doesn't have to infuse a unique personal, immortal soul into a human cloned body. No, Yah doesn't have to cooperate with human efforts to replace him as Creator, as if humanity, on its own, has the capacity of creating beings with immortal souls. No, I think Yah will not tolerate this latest and greatest act of human pride, arrogance, and presumption, which we call human cloning.

The possible result of man's effort to clone human persons may prove to be something quite inhuman. Science can reproduce the human body, but without Yah infusing a human soul, what might the end result be?

We could have creatures that look human, that perhaps can mirror human behavior, and can even distinguish acts for which they can be rewarded from others acts for which they can be punished. But they will not be human beings.

Logically, we must realize that this is the work of the adversary, who is only a counterfeit to what Yahuah has made - the adversary does NOT want his clones to have free-will, which is evident in everything that is being done with these clones, robots, organics, etc. Man must always have control, but the adversary must always own your FREE-WILL.

Jeremiah 1:5

Before I formed, fashioned and ordained (yiqtol) you in the womb I knew, perceived and was aware of you, indeed and even before you came forth (yiqtol) out of the womb I consecrated, made qodesh and dedicated you; I appointed you as prophet and speaker of the message of Yahuah to the nations and people.

Psalm 71:6

The Most High, upon
You I have leaned, been steadfast and supported from birth.
It was you who took me from the womb of my mother. My praise, esteem and adoration is of You continually and unceasing.
