Unit 731 is the most famous of the “Factories of Death” also a book by Sheldon H. Harris – from his book:

Japanese scientists had engaged in research on biological and chemical weapons throughout the region from the moment Japan occupied all of Manchuria in 1931 and 1932 until its surrender in August 1945. The scientists, with the enthusiastic support of the highest government leaders erected secret bases throughout the territory. Here scientists could experiment freely on animals and human subjects without influence from any authority. During its occupation, Japan in effect turned Manchuria into one gigantic biological and chemical warfare laboratory.

Set up as a top-secret biological and chemical weapons facility during the Second Sino-Japanese War and World War Two, Unit 731 has been referred to as the Asian Auschwitz. Through the practice of lethal human experimentation, the unit is thought to have been responsible for the death of up to 200,000 civilians and military personnel – the vast majority Chinese and Korean nationals, but also South East Asians, Pacific Islanders and Allied POWs. In the sprawling six kilometer-square complex in the city of Harbin (now part of Northeast China) those behind the sickening 'research' developed some of the most cruel and sadistic experiments ever to be conducted on human victims. These included vivisection, amputations, germ warfare tests, explosive weapons testing, and much more.

Written by: Michele Collet

And just like the Nazi scientists who were given immunity from war crime prosecution by the American government with Project Paperclip, so too were the main players involved in the outcome of their experiments in Manchuria.

Lt. Col Robert McQuail of Army Intelligence (oxymoron), in a summary prepared for his office in early Jan 1947 notes: A confidential informant claims that Gen/Dr. Shiro Ishii, who was the leading authority and in charge of all the labs, had his assistants inject bubonic plague bacilli into the bodies of some American POW's in Mukden, Manchuria, as an experiment. Instead of being horrified he said, "naturally, the results of these experiments are of the highest intelligence value." Intelligence value, not war crimes would be the dominant factor in all discussions concerning the Japanese biological weapons experts.

Japanese scientists carry out a vivisection - a dissection of a live human being without anesthetics - just one of dozens of human experiments carried out at Unit 731

Unit 731 was built in 1936 in modern-day Harbin, northeastern China, for the Japanese Imperial Army to conduct research into germ warfare, weapons capabilities and the limits of the human body.

Photographs from the new book - Unit 731: Laboratory of the Devil, Auschwitz of the East - shows Japanese soldiers taking part in a vivisection - carrying out operations on a live person to study living tissue and organs.

Extensive experiments into frostbite were carried out, as the Japanese tried to find the best cure for the affliction.

The flesh would then be stripped off the bones - the prisoner still alive.

Prisoners would be infected with diseases, after which their organs would be removed while still alive so the scientists could study the effects of the disease before decomposition could start.

Evil: The head of Unit 731, Shirō Ishii, who was awarded immunity by the US after the war

Despite thousands of victims, the Japanese government denied the existence of the unit until 1998, when the Supreme Court indirectly acknowledged it by ruling there was an academic consensus that Unit 731 existed.

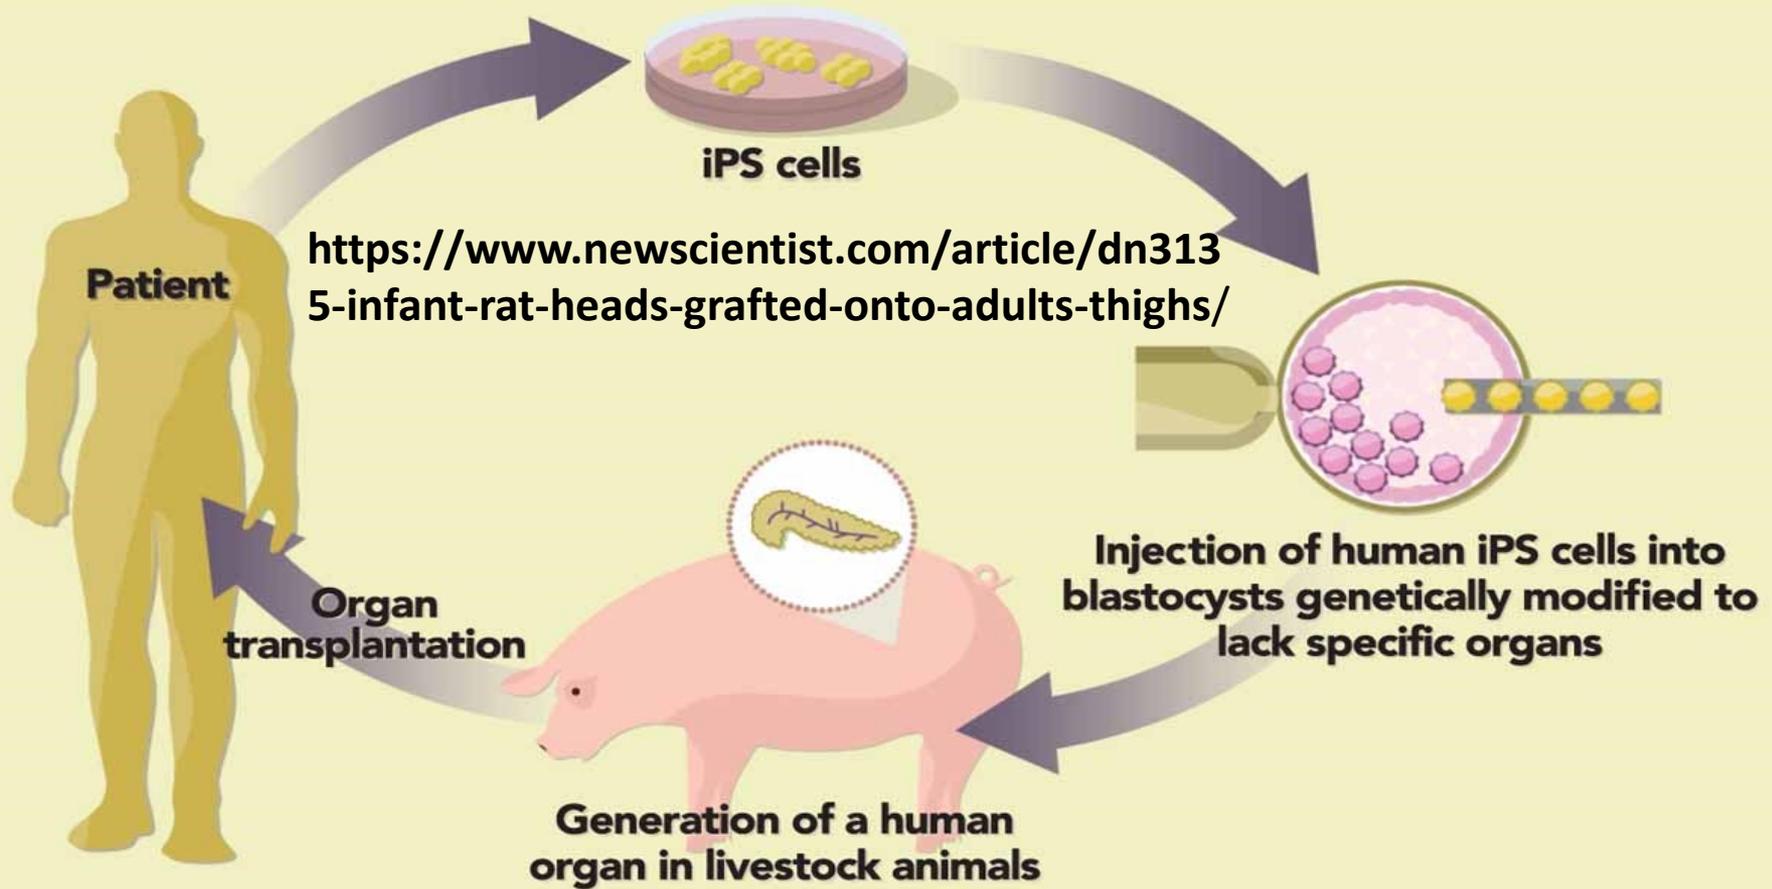

The man largely responsible for the operation of Unit 731, Shirō Ishii, escaped punishment after the war.

Ishii, and several others from Unit 731, were granted immunity by the United States in exchange for full disclosure of the results of their biological warfare experiments.

Ishii died of throat cancer in Tokyo, Japan, in 1959, aged 67.

The Soviet Union did hold trials for eleven of the scientist working at Unit 731 at the end of the war.

They each received between two and 25 years in a Siberian labor camp.

Make note that Japan is still doing experiments during our time that lead one to wonder about their ethics and moral values, but then again as scientific knowledge appears to take precedence over human life and value this would only make sense. Japan has relaxed its ban on chimeric embryo experiments, meaning its ok to mix human and animal DNA together. Here's just a small example, but will be studied further in the "trans-humanism" chapter of what is going on in Japan:

Scientists have carried out a successful head transplant on rats ahead of plans to attempt a similar operation on a human later this year

During the procedure, the head of a smaller rat was attached to the body of a larger rodent. Rather than simply replacing the head, the team attached the donor head to the body of the larger rat, creating an animal with two heads.

Human ears to could be 'grown to order' within five years, claim Japanese scientists who have unveiled a rat with an ear on its back.

Splicing foreign DNA into people is not anything new in our current time, harkening back to the days of Jared/Enoch and Noah.

This pig embryo was injected with human cells early in its development and grew to be four weeks old.

ENOCH -7:1 And they took wives unto themselves, and everyone respectively chose one woman for himself, and they began to go unto them. And they taught them magical medicine, incantations, the cutting of roots, and taught them about plants.

7:2 And the women became pregnant and gave birth to great giants whose heights were three hundred cubits.

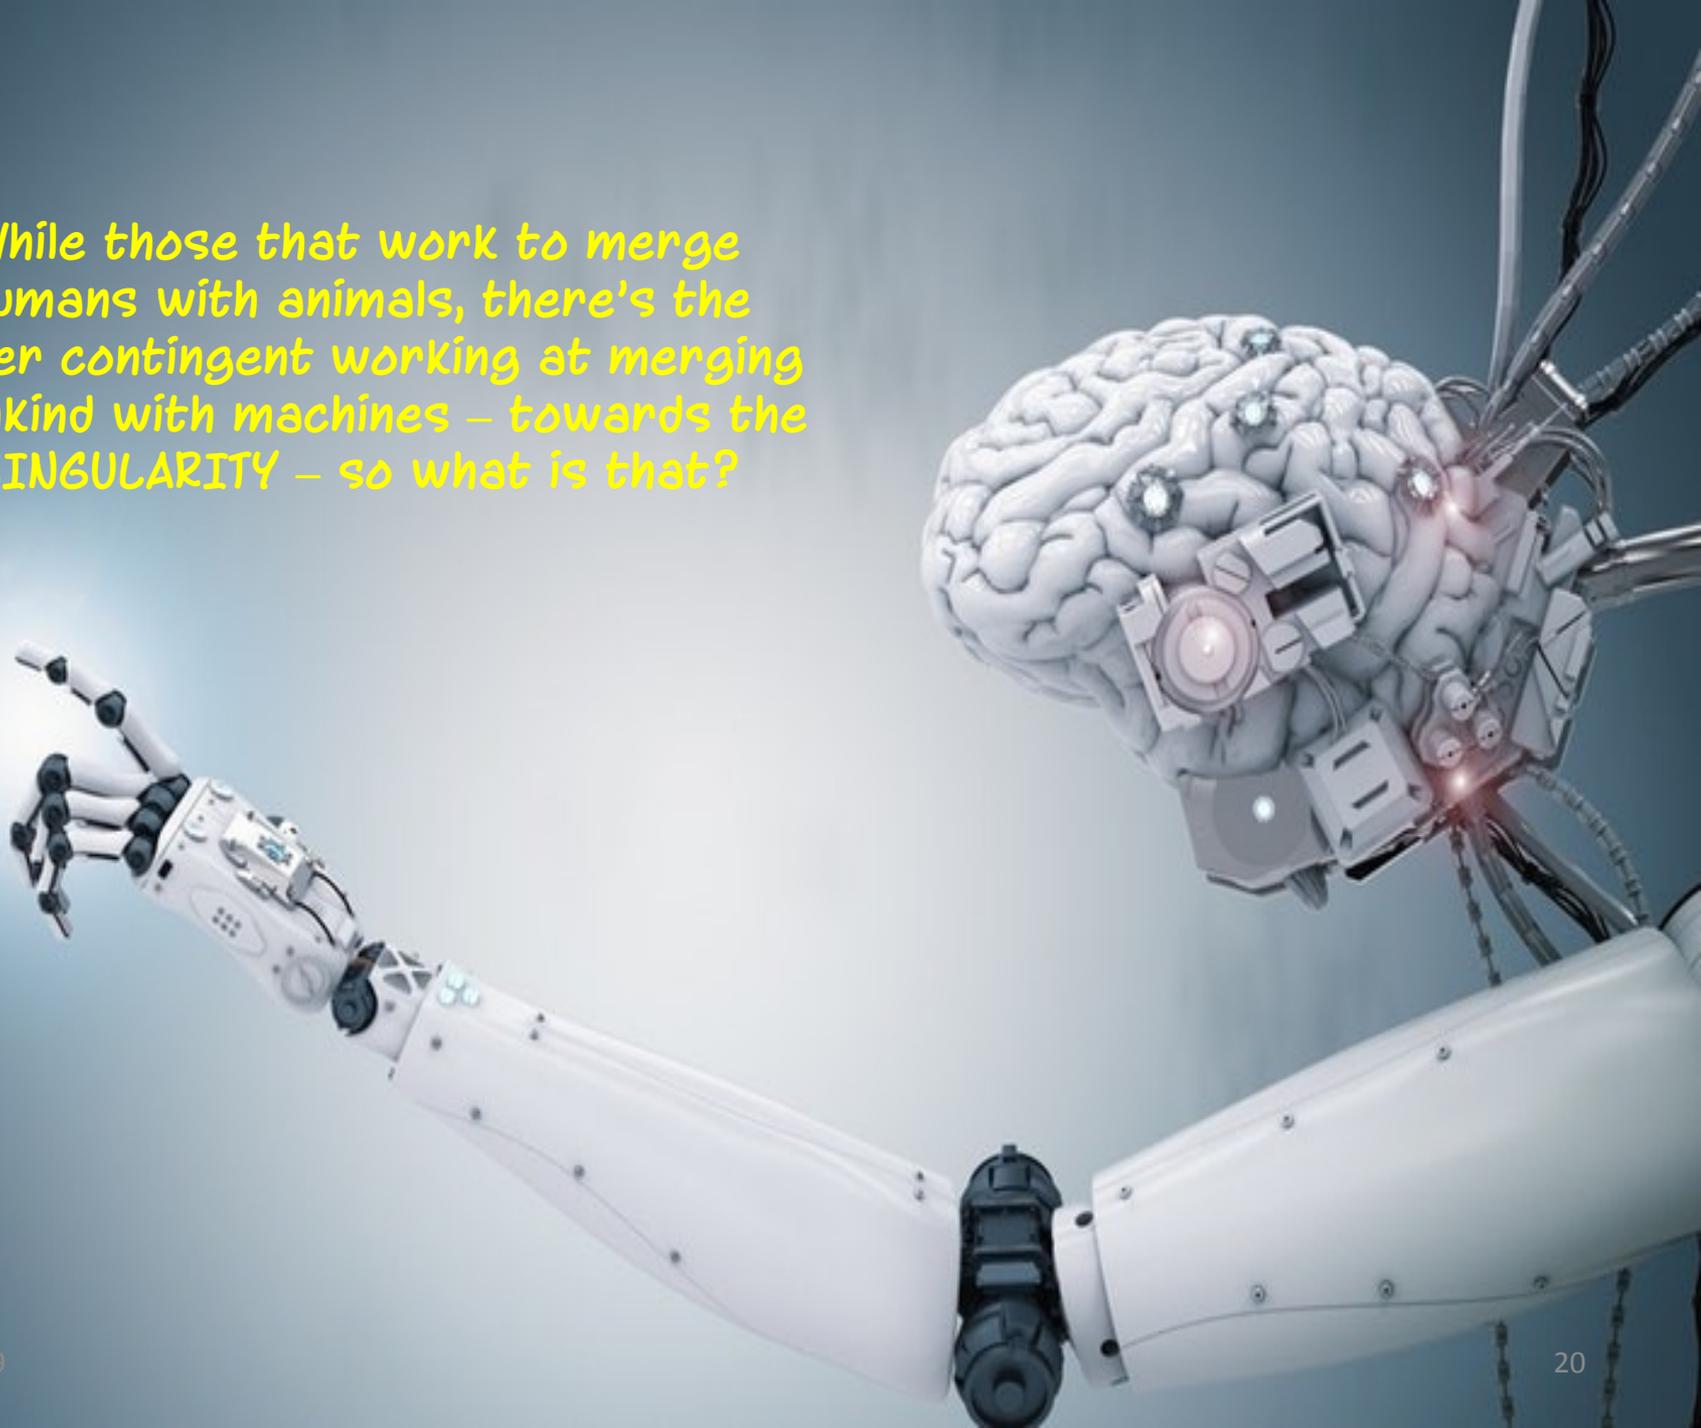

7:3 These giants consumed the produce of all the people until the people detested feeding them.

7:4 So the giants turned against the people in order to eat them.

7:5 And they began to sin against birds, wild beasts, reptiles, and fish. And their flesh was devoured the one by the other, and they drank blood.

3/9/2019 7:6 And then the earth brought an accusation against the oppressors.

While those that work to merge humans with animals, there's the other contingent working at merging mankind with machines – towards the SINGULARITY – so what is that?

<https://mysteryoftheiniquity.com/2011/02/24/transhumanism-is-a-reality/>

So you think
TRANSHUMANISM is a farce, a fake reality? You think it's all conspiracy theory tactics?

The founders of Transhumanism, were highly educated and wealthy individuals of primarily British and European descent. These individuals were what we would call people of the elite, ruling class of society, and their views were absolutely elitist, if not outright totalitarian and fascist in nature.

Transhumanists believe they are working toward a new and improved existence, leaving everything we have known in the dust bin of history, welcoming a new “Golden Age” of superbeings. They want to become an entirely new species, transcending what we are as humans, using radically advanced technology to achieve their goals. Let’s look at just a few of the primary concepts and goals of Transhumanism.

3/9/2018 One of the primary concepts of the Transhumanist agenda is “The Hive Mind”²²

The founders of Transhumanism had elitist views about what humanity should be. This Human Beehive concept has been envisioned by the ruling elite class throughout history as the ideal society. The ultimate slave race, scientifically designed to conform, obey and serve the needs of the elite – worker bees who do not question or rebel.

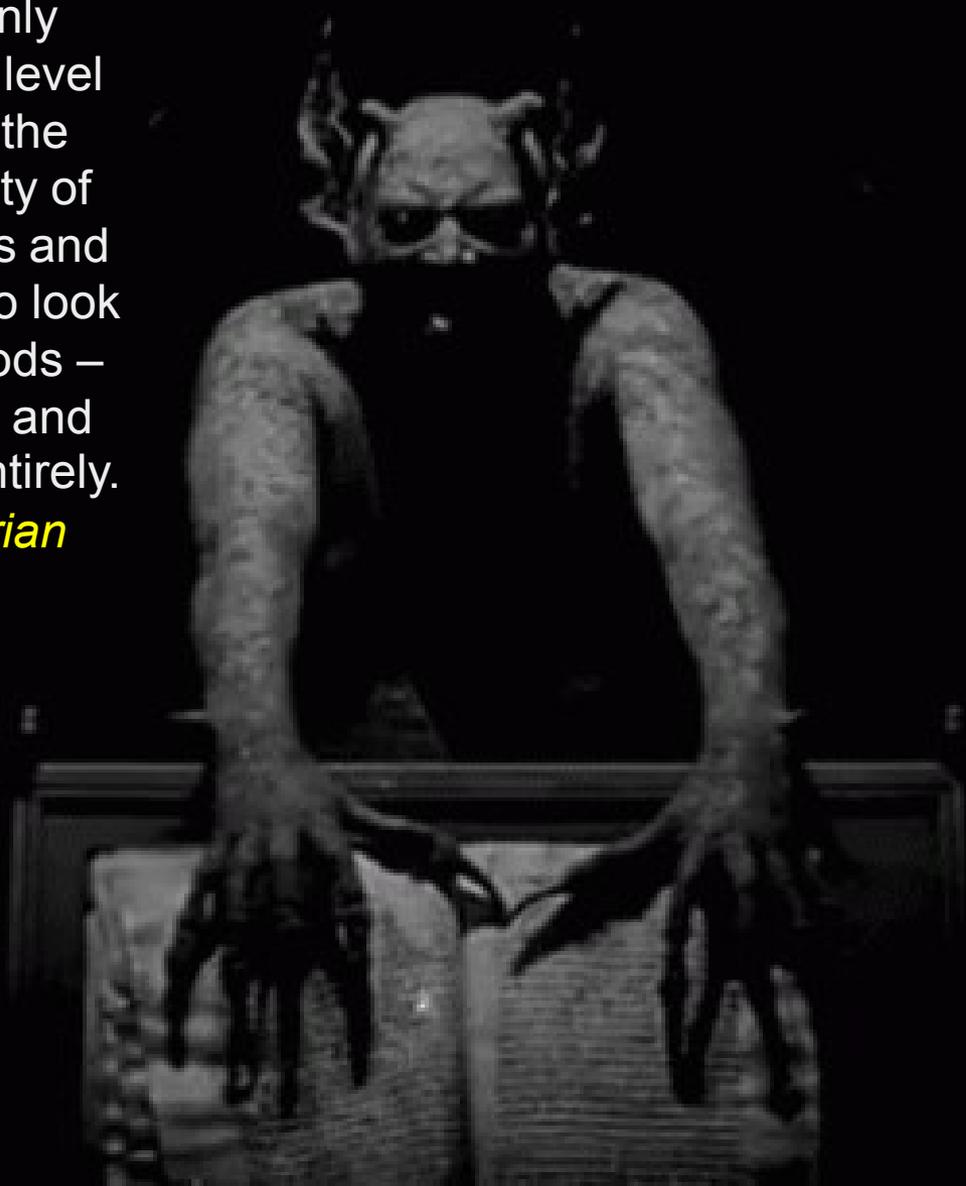

Transhumanists envision this Hive Mind as being possible when all people across the world can link their minds together using technology, creating a symbiotic existence through the new superintelligence of this collective Hive Mind. They refer to this collective, superintelligence as the Singularity.

The Hive Mind, or Singularity, that they are working toward, will occur, they believe, when technology exists that will allow humans to “upload their minds” to an artificial memory device, a sort of global hard drive, so that the combined intelligence of all our minds will create this new superintelligence that is the Singularity, or Hive Mind.

Transhumanist ideas of becoming gods and having eternal life through technology certainly display an extreme level of vanity. Not just the simple human vanity of wearing nice clothes and putting on makeup to look good – but to BE gods – therefore, rejecting and replacing Yahuah, entirely.

This is the Luciferian doctrine.

Cybernetics expert Kevin Warwick, of Coventry University, sees no problem in approving the removal of natural limbs and their replacement with artificial blades. “What is wrong with replacing imperfect bits of your body with artificial parts that will allow you to perform better – or which might allow you to live longer?” he says.

Warwick is a cybernetics enthusiast who, over the years, has had several different electronic devices implanted into his body. “One allowed me to experience ultrasonic inputs. It gave me a bat sense, as it were. I also interfaced my nervous system with my computer so that I could control a robot hand and experience what it was touching. I did that when I was in New York, but the hand was in a lab in England.”

QUICK REPLY BY KEVIN WARWICK ORIGINAL

<https://www.dailymail.co.uk/sciencetech/article-6933409/Scientists-create-programmable-circuits-human-cells-lead-biocomputers.html>

Researchers say they've successfully created a more powerful computer-like human cell that could eventually be used to help monitor one's health or even fight against cancer and other illnesses.

Using the gene-editing tool CRISPR-Cas9, researchers were able to model a human cell after a computer and make what they are referring to as a 'program scalable circuits.'

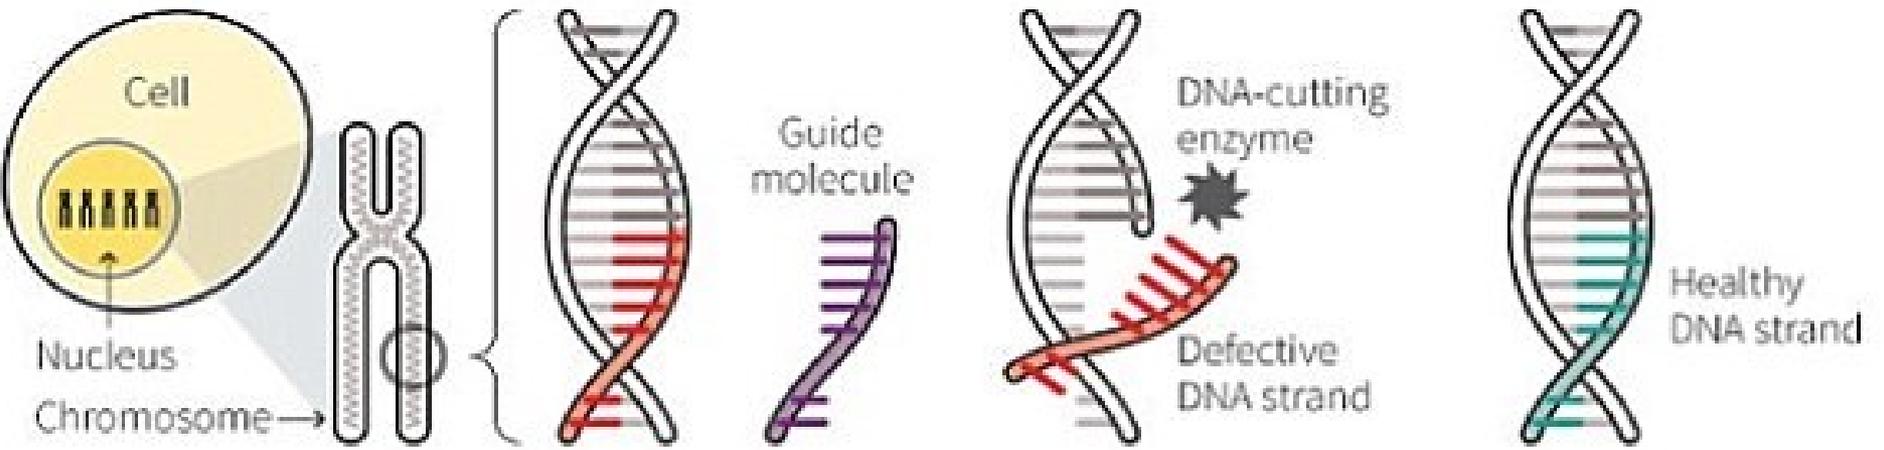

'The human body itself is a large computer. Its metabolism has drawn on the computing power of trillions of cells since time immemorial.'

The discovery marks a major breakthrough for scientists looking to create computer-like cells that can help improve the human body.

DNA editing

A DNA editing technique, called CRISPR/Cas9, works like a biological version of a word-processing programme's "find and replace" function.

HOW THE TECHNIQUE WORKS

A cell is transfected with an enzyme complex containing:

- Guide molecule
- Healthy DNA copy
- DNA-cutting enzyme

A specially designed synthetic guide molecule finds the target DNA strand.

An enzyme cuts off the target DNA strand.

The defective DNA strand is replaced with a healthy copy.

Back to the Roswell Incident

It is now being discussed that those Roswell aliens are nothing more than people who have been enhanced physically or due to their physical disabilities were experimented with or to create something else.

All of the following is from Nick Redfern's book: Body Snatchers in the Desert.

Mr. Redfern interviewed a woman who worked at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory which is at the base of the Appalachian Mountains in Tennessee. This is place back in the 40's where the US was working on the atomic bomb, separating uranium-235 from uranium-238. It was her duty to assist in research that was being conducted at the time to determine the effects of radiation and high-altitude exposure on the human body. Much of the research was related to experiments that had been undertaken both at Oak Ridge and Los Alamos after 1946 and that specifically centered upon the military's then-fledgling plans to build and fly a nuclear-powered, prototype aircraft. They needed to know what the possible effects that such a power source might have on the physical health of the aircraft's crew when matters progressed to actual test plans.

Dummies like these, dropped from balloons during tests, spawned stories of alien corpses, the military says.

On three occasions from May to August 1947 (Roswell incident happened in July of 1947), horrible-looking bodies were brought to Clinton (this was the original name of Oak Ridge) in trucks. The bodies arrived in a "preserved" condition and in three batches of five. She added that she personally viewed three of the bodies and had seen black and white photographs of several more.

© Glen McCurtayne

She stated that all of the bodies were "Oriental" -Asian and around five feet in height. Some looked like normal Japanese people, but injured as if from an accident, and several exhibited signs of severe physical handicaps - such as oversized heads and malformed faces and hands; while others had slightly larger and protruding eyes. She continues, those bodies, the Roswell bodies, they weren't aliens. The government could care less about stories of alien bodies found at Roswell - except to hide the truth. Those bodies were Japanese people.

Early Construction of the K-25 uranium enrichment facility (background), with one of original houses of Oak Ridge, Tennessee in the foreground, in 1942. That year, the United States Army Corps of Engineers began quickly acquiring land in the Oak Ridge area, at the request of the U.S. government, to build production facilities for the Manhattan Project. The K-25 plant, when completed, was the largest building in the world for a time

In the 40's, research into "atomic issues" was undertaken at Oak Ridge, Los Alamos, White Sands Proving Ground, and the University of Chicago (Chicago, nothing good ever comes out of there). These people, these bodies were seen as expendable and were used in tests and experiments.

She learned at Oak Ridge the government had first acquired some of the people and bodies in early 1945 after a battle between American and Japanese troops on a small island in the Pacific.

After the Japanese unit had been overrun, a small medical laboratory where Japanese doctors and scientists conducted all manner of atrocities on both physically and mentally handicapped people were discovered on the island.

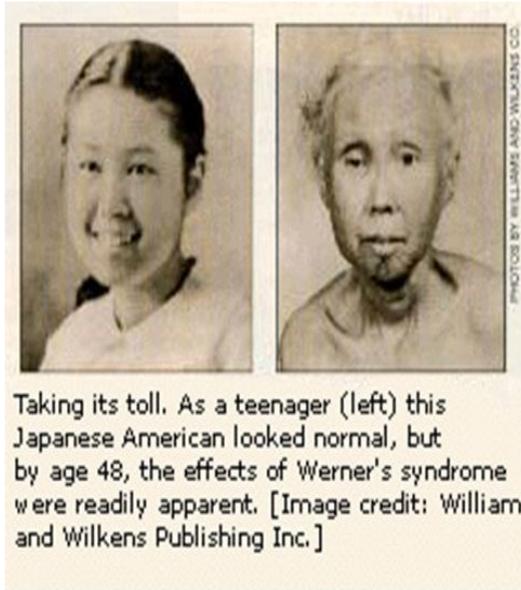

For the most part the surviving people of the experiments, although severely traumatized and scarred, "looked normal". But there were some that though human, did not. Some were obviously the result of inbreeding and some showed characteristics of larger heads, progeria or having six-fingers – all kinds of syndromes.

Progeroid diseases – aging quickly?

- Werner Syndomes (Mutations in a DNA repair gene)

Hutchinson Gilford Progeria

A glowing, circular object, possibly a UFO, is shown in a dark sky. It has a bright, glowing ring around its perimeter and a smaller, similar ring inside. A beam of light emanates from the center of the object, pointing downwards. The background is a dark, overcast sky with silhouettes of trees in the foreground.

She also states that there were those working on some strange aircraft ideas at Oak Ridge and White Sands, and the two crossed paths and merged to an extent.

Confirming the story of the woman from Oak Ridge, was a British man by the name of Levine who verified after the Japanese surrendered a number of these bodies and a "quantity" of still living people were found in the remains of Unit 731 facilities (bodies were also found in German laboratories) by allied soldiers.

A glowing, dome-shaped object, possibly a UFO, is visible in a field of tall grass. The object is emitting a bright, multi-colored light, with a prominent red and orange glow. The background is a clear, bright blue sky. The overall scene is surreal and mysterious.

Mr. Levine confirmed the fact that a number of these people were dwarves, handicapped, with enlarged heads, and were used in a variety of experiments in the New Mexico desert that involved everything from biological warfare to high-altitude tests linked with prototype aircraft developed in the immediate postwar era. This is where, according to Levine, the stories of alien bodies recovered from crashed UFO's had their origins.

It is being said that the crash in Roswell was indeed a weather balloon. We for the most part have a concept of a balloon that doesn't remotely look like what the governments uses. Japan for example had been experimenting with high-altitude balloons that could carry bombs to the west. As a matter of fact in Body Snatchers of the Desert, it describes how this was carried out and that about 1000 of these types of bombs made it to the West Coast and there were some fatal consequences. The Japanese wanted to also use them to carry biological weapons, i.e. the bubonic plague, anthrax, etc. Before they were able to accomplish that, the bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki were dropped.

Many witnesses of the debris described tape with flower designs or hieroglyphics on it. Moore recalls that the reinforcing tape used on NYU targets had curious markings. "There were about four of us who were involved in this, and all remember that our targets had sort of a stylized, flowerlike design. I have prepared, in my life, probably more than a hundred of these targets for flight. And every time I have prepared one of these targets, I have always wondered what the purpose of that tape marking was. But . . . a major named John Peterson, laughed . . . and said 'What do you expect when you get your targets made by a toy factory?'"

The radar targets contained small eyelets. Moore showed the NMSR audience a similar target with the eyelets. In an article in the Roswell Daily Record on July 9, 1947, rancher Brazel described the debris as having no strings or wire, but as having eyelets for some sort of attachment.

While many UFO proponents claim the wreckage shown in General Ramey's office was just a weather balloon switched for the "real debris," Moore pointed out that the radar targets used by NYU were unlike anything flown in New Mexico before and that "they were not available in Fort Worth to be substituted for the debris in General Ramey's office." Warrant Officer Newton was able to recognize the debris in General Ramey's office because he happened to have used an early version of the same targets while serving as a weatherman in Okinawa. The earlier-model targets Newton used did not have the reinforcing tape with the pinkish-purple flower designs.

Interesting note is that in Whitely Strieber's Majestic, one of his characters describes the "saucer" as having what they called wallpaper with flower designs on it that you could see through but was incredibly strong.

The idea that we are being visited by "creatures" from another world begins to look more and more like what it really is – demon possession. I mean, after all to be able to do some of the things that have been done in the name of "science" one would have to be possessed.

Stay tuned for Part 3
